Hamilton Bans Bearded Son Of Naval Hero

FACIAL FOLIAGE — Gen. Ulysses S. Grant was among a host of U.S. Army officers who sported "beavers" in days gone by. Nobody objected to their adornments, but . .

By JOHN F. KEARNEY

The father of Gray Ruttledge died in a plane crash while on active duty with the U.S. Navy. As a dependent, Gray is entitled to the security and other benefits of Hamilton Air Force Base.

Not so, say the base authorities. Why? Because the 17-year-old youth wears a beard and has let his hair grow.

As the son of a man who served the United States as a lieutenant and gave his life for his country, Gray is entitled to an identification card allowing him through the base gates.

Not so, say the base authorities. Why? Because his appearance conflicts with a base regulation which clearly states an I.D. card can be refused a civilian if he doesn't measure up—imagewise.

And what is more, unless Gray shapes up and "conforms"—like getting a shave and haircut — air police have orders not to allow him on base except for medical emergencies, says a high ranking officer.

Under this base rule, bearded Ulysses S. Grant would be hustled back through the gates. Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside — who gave his name to sideburns — would be banned from the base as would Robert E. Lee, beard and all.

"Sorry, but regulations are regulations," Capt. William H. Powell Jr., base security officer, told Gray and his mother, Laverne P. Ruttledge when they presented themselves in a base office for renewal of their I.D. privileges this week.

Stunned and angry, Mrs. Ruttledge, widow of Lt. De Langton E. Ruttledge, killed March 21, 1952, refused to accept her own I.D. card and returned to her home at 9 Parkwood Avenue, Mill Valley.

And there, she wrote a letter to the Independent-Journal (see "What Our Readers Say," page 24) in which she posed the question whether her husband died in vain.

"Lt. Ruttledge died believing that among other things, he was fighting to insure the freedom of his wife and of his sons, and further believing that should he die he would have at least provided for them certain securities and benefits accruing to the widows and orphans of military men, one among them being hospital and medical assistance," she wrote.

"Today both the freedom and the securities and benefits he fought for have been stripped from us.

"Gray has not only lost a father whom he can scarcely remember, but is also to lose the benefits which that father sought to secure for his son. All of this through the capricious whim of a military mind."

Mrs. Ruttledge concludes: "I defend Gray's right to a beard, just as I defend all of our inherent freedoms—and I defend the right of every male, American citizen to wear a beard — even that of Gen. U. S. Grant."

She wrote similar letters to Base Commander Col. Charles Praul, the secretaries of the Air Force and Navy, Sen. George Murphy and Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel, among others.

Bearded Gray Ruttledge explained yesterday what happened when he, his mother, and brother Lance, 19, applied at a base office Thursday.

The family had filled out the application forms for the renewal — required every four years — and the desk clerk was just about to issue the I.D. card to Gray.

"Then an officer with greater rank suddenly appeared and said it couldn't be done," the youth said. "I demanded to see his superior and, after a lot of talking, I got to see Captain Powell. He showed me the base order and said he was powerless to grant the card."

At the base yesterday, Captain Powell, security officer, was not available for comment. "We cannot give you any information," said his secretary.

Lt. Col. Robert H. Mucha, director of information, quoted administrative regulation HAFBR-30-1, used as the basis for refusal of the I.D. card.

It says dependents and other civilians are expected to be "well groomed" and dressed in a way "commensurate with the accepted tradition and decorum of military installations."

He said: "We do not allow beards or long hair on males on the base and we even forbid women in short shorts and halters near the base exchange.

"This is Hamilton's own regulation but most other installations have like rules. It is just that we don't like people walking around a military base looking like rag-bags."

The lieutenant colonel said Gray would be allowed on the base for medical assistance only. "But unless he conforms a little more with accepted standards in appearance, it is not our intention to issue him a card.

"The base commander is writing a personal letter to Mrs. Ruttledge to explain the facts."

BANNED NOW — Gray Ruttledge, 17, son of a Navy flier killed on active duty, can't use the facilities of Hamilton Air Force Base because of his beard.

Rap Brown Faces Arms Charges

NEW YORK (UPI) — Militant black power advocate H. Rap Brown was arrested today and held in $25,000 bond on federal charges of transporting a rifle and 31 rounds of ammunition across state lines while under indictment.

Brown, 23, chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), was seized by federal agents at 2 a.m. as he left an apartment in the Chelsea section of Manhattan.

SELF PROTECTION

At a preliminary hearing before a U.S. commissioner, civil rights attorney William M. Kunstler said Brown had carried the semiautomatic carbine in Louisiana yesterday for self protection.

"Many people in Louisiana would like to see his liquidation," Kunstler said.

U.S. Commissioner Earle N. Bishopp set the high bail over Kunstler's objection that it was "exorbitant and outrageous."

Brown was accused of violating the National Firearms Act by carrying the carbine from Louisiana to New York while under indictment on a charge of inciting a riot in Cambridge, Md. He is free in $10,000 bail on that count.

AGENTS ARREST

Internal Revenue Service (IRS) agents arrested the slight, mustachioed Brown as he left the apartment on West 19th Street in the decaying, racially mixed neighborhood. He offered no resistance. Officials said he was with a "large group" of followers. He was taken to the Federal House of Detention to await the hearing.

During the hearing Brown, wearing dungarees, sports jacket, open-necked shirt and sneakers, spoke only to give his name.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Stephen Kaufman asked for the $25,000 bail on grounds that the offense was a "serious" one He said that in addition to the carbine, Brown carried a "banana clip" filled with 31 rounds of ammunition.

MARIN COUNTY POPULATION IS OVER 200,000

Marin County's population has passed the 200,000 mark, according to the State Department of Finance.

In estimates of population as of July 1 of this year, the department today credited Marin with 201,200 people — increase of 54,380, or 37 per cent, since the 1960 federal census.

The department estimated total population of California at 19,535,000, an increase of 24.3 per cent since the census.

It pegged Sonoma County population at 187,500. In 1960, Sonoma had a few more residents than Marin — 147,375 to 146,820.

EPIDEMIC FEARS

Mice March Is Unchecked

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (UPI)—Waves of field mice gorging themselves across vast areas of Bosnian farmland today were feared to be spreading disease of possible epidemic proportions.

Distraught peasants tried to stem the advancing menace by rushing into their fields at night and killing the mice with hoes, shovels, rocks and other tools.

It was a forlorn fight.

One farmer, Petar Hamzic, said, "The mice are not afraid of people. We stood there in the fields killing them, but they just kept coming."

One man died and 50 other persons were hospitalized yesterday in the village of Fojnica. They suffered from an unspecified kidney disease health authorities blamed on disease-carrying mice.

Fojnica is 24 miles west of Sarajevo in a region where millions of ravenous mice have been sweeping unchecked across fields and causing crop damage estimated at more than $250,000.

Health officials mobilized medical teams in Sarajevo to move into the beleaguered villages and try to head off a major epidemic. Their concern was heightened by belief the field mice recently caused a typhus epidemic in Serbia.

Demands streamed in to government offices throughout the area for action to halt the spreading wave of crop destruction.

Government officials insisted they could do nothing. They said poisoning was the only feasible way to get rid of the mice and this would endanger other wildlife and domestic animals.

Many peasants in remote mountainous areas were reduced to eating boiled hay because they had no food supplies left and emergency rations had not yet reached them.

Whole villages were threat-

Husband Admits Wife Shooting, House Fire

Viet Military Leaders Reject Election Delay

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnam's two military leaders seeking the nation's highest elective offices today rejected suggestions the Sept. 3 election be postponed to give their civilian rivals more time to campaign.

Chief of State Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu and Premier Nguyen Cao Ky have been accused of unfair tactics by their opponents in the campaign designed to set up South Vietnam's first elected government.

(Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., Thursday urged a one-month postponement of the election to "permit a more meaningful campaign.")

Thieu, favored to win the presidency, told newsmen, "We are a very small country and the people know the candidates well. I don't believe one more week or two more weeks would be useful for the result of the election."

The campaign was almost two weeks late getting rolling following an Aug. 6 abortive start. The civilian hopefuls blamed Ky and Thieu for their plight when they wound up at an isolated airstrip in Dong Ha with no way to get to their scheduled rally seven miles away.

They postponed the campaign for 10 days until they were assured the government would not permit further snafus.

Ky said charges by the civilian candidates of government unfairness appeared "ridiculous."

Father Says Deaths Of Children Accident

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (UPI)—Stearns County Sheriff Peter Lahr said today farmer David Hoskins has admitted shooting his wife and then setting fire to the home where his wife and four children died.

Hoskins has signed a statement saying he shot his wife with a .22 rifle, set fire to the home, and then shot himself with the same rifle, Lahr told a news conference. However, he claimed the burning deaths of his children were an accident, the sheriff said.

"After wounding himself with the death weapon and setting the fire, he also tied himself to an outdoor clothesline pole, and only then realized his children were in the burning house," Lahr quoted Hoskins as saying in the statement.

Lahr said Hoskins told police he attempted to free himself and reach the children in the blazing home, but became entangled in the clothesline and could not free himself. He was found early yesterday entangled in the clothesline facing his flaming home.

"A HOAX"

Lahr said Hoskins, a church deacon and gospel singer, admitted that his earlier story of being tied up and shot by five or six intruders was "a hoax."

Stearns County Attorney Paul Doerner said homicide charges would be filed Monday accusing Hoskins of the deaths of his wife, Loretta, 29, and their children, Julie Ann, 6, Darla, 4, Linda, 1, and David Eli 6 weeks.

Doerner refused to elaborate on what charges were planned.

Lahr said a motive for the slaying was established, but he refused to say what it was. He said Hoskins was "quiet and subdued" as he gave his statement last night from his hospital bed to Lahr, Doerner and a public stenographer.

BREAKS DOWN

Hoskins signed the statement after reading the transcript carefully, Lahr said.

Lahr said a 22 caliber, bolt action rifle had been used for the shooting. He said Hoskins told them after shooting his wife he shot himself twice, working the bolt to reload after the first shot, then left the rifle inside the home and went outside.

Gasoline was used to set the house on fire, he said.

Lahr said Hoskins gave his statement after being questioned several times by authorities. "We went back to him because, well, his story just didn't jibe. It didn't make sense in any way," Lahr said.

The charred bodies of Mrs. Hoskins and the children were recovered from the burned-out home during the morning

Supply Routes Targets Again Of U.S. Jets

SAIGON (UPI) — American warplanes battered Communist supply routes in North Vietnam with a near-record 186 missions yesterday, U.S. officials said today. The Air Force flew 105 of the missions, a record.

The Navy and Air Force supersonic jets concentrated on the southern panhandle of North Vietnam, a main supply route to the South.

Huge U.S. B-52 bombers today followed up the fighter-bomber sweeps by blasting the A Shau valley in the most northern part of South Vietnam, the key supply zone where the Communists are reported building for another new offensive against U.S. Marines entrenched near the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

Two battalions of U.S. Marines and a battalion of Vietnamese infantrymen made heliborne assaults today into the suspected mountain hideout of the 2nd North Vietnamese Division about 30 miles from Da Nang. Only sporadic sniper fire was reported in the early hours of the drive into the steep brush-covered mountains about 10 miles inland from the South China Sea in Quang Tin Province.

U.S. planes flew a record 197 missions over the Communist nation Aug. 3. It was not revealed whether any American planes were lost Friday.

American officials in Saigon disclosed that 647 American warplanes have been lost over North Vietnam, three more than previously reported, No explanation was given for the downings of the additional

Provincial Rampage By Anti-Maoists

HONG KONG (UPI) — Rampaging anti-Maoist elements in Kweichow Province kidnaped top leaders of the provincial capital's revolutionary committee, attacked military units and burned buildings in the province's largest college earlier this week, the Mao-controlled Kweichow Radio disclosed today.

A Japanese news agency said rival gangs of Red Guards clashed in Peking during a rally called to denounce street fighting and more than 200 persons were injured.

Other reports told of widespread street fighting between rebel and loyal army troops in Canton and of a second army uprising in Chekiang Province, birthplace of Nationalist President Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Kweichow Radio, in a broadcast from the provincial capital of Kweiyang, vividly described the rampage of rebellious elements apparently led by students of the Kweichow Technological Institute.

Previous reports from the southwest China province had told of serious troubles at the institute located in the capital.

Russ Ships Leave Egyptian Ports

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Soviet warships have left Egyptian ports to which they were assigned in the aftermath of the Middle East war and were sailing today for an unknown destination, the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said.

The authoritative paper said the Soviet vessels, assigned to Egyptian harbors July 11, steamed out into the Mediterranean Friday.

Sixteen Soviet warships, including rocket carriers, submarines, destroyers and troop landing craft, arrived in the harbors of Alexandria and Port Said last month.

Reports earlier in the week said some Soviet naval craft left Alexandria and Port Said. Later, four Soviet ships arrived in Algiers but it could not be confirmed if they were the same vessels that left Egypt.

In another Middle East development today Beirut newspapers reported the first signs of disunity at the Arab economic ministers meeting in Baghdad.

The reports said the Iraqi plan for a three-month oil embargo on shipments to the West was met with reservations by the Saudi Arabian delegation.

Saudi Arabia has taken the stand before that an Arab oil embargo hurts the Arab economies at a time when they need money to mobilize for another battle with Israel.

Until today the Arab economic ministers claimed they were in complete agreement that sanctions against the West were necessary.

Jordan's King Hussein arrived in Khartoum, the Sudan, last night to a tumultuous welcome. He flew in from Saudi Arabia.

Hussein is on a 10-day swing through Arab capitals, drumming up support for his country's campaign to regain territory lost to Israel in the June war.

Oil Depot Is Raging Inferno

MONTREAL (AP)—Fire that started at a loading ramp turned a petroleum storage depot into a raging inferno today. Flames and smoke billowed hundreds of feet into the sky.

About 200 firemen fought to control the blaze, which threatened huge tanks of fuel oil and gasoline more than eight hours after the first alarm.

Hopland Grade Fire Contained

LAKEPORT (AP) — A brush fire on the Hopland Grade 100 miles north of San Francisco was contained tentatively early today after burning over about 1,000 acres of brush. Full control was expected by nightfall.

No one was injured and no structures were endangered.

The California Division of Forestry and the Lakeport Fire Department had 143 men and 42 pieces of equipment fighting the fire.

The Division of Forestry said fire danger in the area was extreme. Open burning permits have been canceled.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Bunker Rapped–Political Meddling

SAIGON (UPI) — Tran Van Huong, a firebrand former premier of South Vietnam, and now the leading civilian candidate for the nation's presidency, yesterday accused U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker of meddling in South Vietnam's internal affairs.

Bunker

Huong claimed Bunker was out of line for declaring the Sept. 3 election campaign was proceeding freely and fairly.

Bunker's statement followed Huong's accusation that Premier Nguyen Cao Ky and Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu had police and and government officials harrass and intimidate Huong's campaign workers in the Mekong Delta.

Huong said Ky and Thieu, the military favorites in the race, organized gangs of what he called "blue shirt" hooligans to intimidate his campaigners. Bunker said rumors of unfairness "are the nature" of any hotly contested election.

Huong told newsmen he had received, as recently as yesterday morning, new reports that "hooligans" and government police loyal to Thieu and Ky had intimidated his campaign workers and South Vietnamese who might vote for him.

The U.S. embassy made an immediate reply to Huong's charge.

Romney Takes Look At Red China

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — A flexible posture is the only realistic one the United States can maintain on the admission of Red China to the United Nations, Michigan Gov. George Romney said yesterday.

Romney

In his first in-depth look at the China question, Romney said U.S. policy must be directed toward encouraging the Communist Chinese to prepare for U.N. membership side-by-side with Nationalist China.

He said Red China is not now ready for membership in the world body because of its own behavior. But should Red China decide to emerge from isolation and demonstrate willnigness to dedicate itself to furthering world peace in keeping with the U.N. charter, the United States should welcome its membership, Romney said.

It was the latest venture into international affairs for the Michigan governor, considered a top prospect for the 1968 Republican presidential nomination.

Cost Of War

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department reports military spending last month rose nearly $1.5 billion above that of July 1966 and reached $6.151 billion, the highest level in four months.

The department said yesterday the military accounted for more than half of all July government spending totaling $11.502 billion. Next highest was $1.142 billion for interest on the national debt.

Nuclear Test

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)—The Atomic Energy Commission conducted a low yield underground nuclear test yesterday at the Nevada Test Site, the 19th such blast announced this year.

The AEC said no radiation escaped into the atmosphere from the blast, which had a force of up to 20 kilotons, the equivalent of 20,000 tons of TNT.

Not Rabid

BOZEMAN, Mont. (UPI) — The four Grizzlies shot by park rangers in Glacier National Park apparently did not suffer from rabies, according to a Montana State University veterinarian.

It is believed that two of the Grizzly bears are responsible for the deaths of Michelle Koons, San Diego, Calif., and Julie Helgeson, Albert Lea, both 19, who were mauled to death at two separate locations in the one-million acre park.

Official Now

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Queen Mary is Long Beach's — officially.

The transAtlantic veteran liner became official property of Long Beach in ceremonies last night in London.

Purchased for $3.4 million, the retired luxury cruiser will become a hotel, convention center, and maritime museum, permanently docked in the port city.

Smog Leaves

NEW YORK (AP) — The hazy envelope of smog that choked much of the Eastern Seaboard since Wednesday is gone for the most part today and showers are expected to clean out the pockets that are left.

The bad air reached from Albany, N.Y. and Connecticut to the Carolina coast and parts of Georgia. It made breathing difficult and being outdoors inpleasant.

Meter Maid Is Seriously Hurt

A San Rafael meter maid was seriously injured last night when the car she was driving hit a parked car in Loma Verde, California Highway Patrol reported today.

Billie Meader, 40, of 429 Calle De La Mesa, Novato, suffered a severe scalp cut and was listed in fair condition today at Novato General Hospital.

Patrol officers said she was driving west along Alameda de la Loma at 9 p.m. when her vehicle hit a parked car outside No. 160.

Tax Relief For Tuna Boats Signed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan has signed a bill providing a giant property tax cut for tuna boats and other vessels documented to California ports.

Academy Job

Olds, a 44-year-old former football star at the U.S. Military Academy, at West Point is the leading MIG killer of the war. He is credited with downing four MIGs in aerial combat over North Vietnam. One more kill would make him the first ace of the Vietnam War.

Muni Judges To Attend Conference

Marin's municipal court benches will have a full new team for the next two weeks.

Its three judges, Peter Allen Smith, Hadden W. Roth, and Alvin H. Goldstein Jr., will attend the two-week conference of the California College of Trial Judges at Earl Warren Legal Center, University of California, Berkeley, starting Monday.

Court officials said judges borrowed from other areas will fill in for Marin County. These include Judge Charles M. Thomas Jr. of Garberville Judicial District, Humboldt County, next Monday through Friday; Judge Lowell Palmer of St. Helena Judicial District, Napa County, from Aug. 29-31; Judge Lawrence P. Scherb of Culver Judicial District, Los Angeles County, on a tentative basis; and Judge David R. Baty, Northwestern Judicial District, Marin, on Sept. 1 only.

Further arrangements are still being made, they said. Judge Goldstein said he anticipates no special problems in the plan.

Clues Remain Slim; Family To Be Buried

SHELL LAKE, Sask. (UPI)—A common grave dug into the hard bush country ground by a tractor awaited the bodies of a man, his wife and seven children today as Canadian Mounties widened their search for their killer.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police sought the aid of all Canadian police agencies to track down even the remotest suspect at last Tuesday's mass slaying.

"We haven't got a definite suspect . . . we have had no good leads," said Sgt. R.R. Sondergaard, an RCMP briefing officer who summed up the Mounties' case.

Yesterday newsmen were shown through the neatly kept house with its worn and cracked linoleum floor before Mounties turned the house over to the surviving members of the family to be locked. The father of the family, James Peterson, 47, had never locked his doors. It would have been an unusual practice in this friendly community.

The sole survivor of the massacre, Phyllis Peterson, 4, was being cared for by her uncle. Relatives planned to gather around a small evergreen tree in a cemetery near here later today for the mass burial.

An Anglican minister will read the short service from an Anglican prayer book for Peterson, his wife, Evelyn, 42, and the seven young victims, Kathy, 20, Jean, 17, Mary, 13, Dorothy, 11, Pearl, 9, William, 6, and Collins, 2, all shot by a .22 caliber rifle—27 bullets in all.

Crash Injury

Patrick C. Smith, 41, of 54 Bulkley Avenue, Sausalito, was treated for a bruised chin Thursday after the car he was driving reportedly struck a parked car of Mrs. Dale F. Bernstein of Oakland at 79 Harrison Avenue. Smith struck the windshield in the accident, which occurred at 2:22 p.m. He was taken to Marin General Hospital.

Governor Vows Peace At Weekend Rallies

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)—Gov. John McKeithen has vowed to dispatch 1,000 additional National Guard troops into the state capital to insure peace during two Negro civil rights rallies and two demonstrations by the Ku Klux Klan this weekend.

Two battalions of National Guard troops and 175 state police officers escorted 60 Negro (100-mile) marchers to the city limits yesterday after a day of harassment by white hecklers.

McKeithen said he would call the additional troops as insurance against rioting.

"It's (rioting) got to stop somewhere, and I say let's stop it in Louisiana on the steps of the capitol," McKeithen said Friday night in a statewide broadcast. "There may be some riots, but they'll be over real quick."

H. Rap Brown, arrested early today in New York for violation of federal weapons regulations, was to have addressed a civil rights rally tomorrow. (See story page 1).

Thirty-minutes after the Negroes are slated to leave the area, a Klan group is to arrive for a demonstration.

The marchers planned to go to a park in the Negro section. Lincoln Lynch, associate national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, is scheduled to address the rally.

A branch of the Klan from Stone Mountain, Ga., has scheduled a rally an hour later just south of the city.

McKeithen promised Friday he would arrest both Negroes and klansmen on the spot if either started trouble.

The governor said he would take "personal pleasure" in arresting Brown, who faces charges in Maryland and Ohio for arson, inciting a riot and advocating criminal syndicalism.

Abortion Banks Said Operating At Five Colleges

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (UPI) —Birth control crusader William Baird says abortion banks for pregnant coeds currently are operating at five college campuses.

He told delegates to the National Student Association (NSA) congress yesterday that the slush funds, to which coeds contribute for insurance against unwanted children, are prospering at the University of Maryland, George Washington University, American University, Boston University and the University of California at Berkeley.

Groups of coeds, often in sororities, contribute to a kitty which usually holds $500, Baird explained. When one of the girls gets pregnant, he said, she may borrow the necessary funds for an abortion and pay it back later "for the next girl in trouble."

California's Farm Income May Decline

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California farmers may suffer a reduction in gross income this year, the Department of Agriculture said yesterday.

The department predicted cash receipts to farmers from marketings probably will fall below the record $3.95 billion set last year. The figure does not include $103,881,000 in government subsidies paid to California farmers last year.

Dognaping Is Now A Felony

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan has signed into law a bill making dognaping a felony.

The measure, by Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai, makes it a felony to steal a dog for the purpose of sale, medical research or other commercial use, or to take a dog worth more than $200 regardless of the reason for the crime.

JOHNSON UNVEILS NEW FARM POLICY

Collective Bargaining Backed; Same Viet Stand Taken At News Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has unveiled a new farm policy while standing pat on an old policy for Vietnam.

At his first broadcast-telecast news conference in five and one-half months yesterday, Johnson said he thinks "the farmers are on the short end of the stick" and should have the right to bargain collectively for better prices for their products.

"Today," the President said, "the farmer gets a smaller percentage of the dollar for the food that he produces for us than in any other period. I would very much hope that the administration at some date in the reasonably near future could find some legislation that would give to the farmer a means of bargaining reasonably and collectively as we permit workers to do."

And, in a totally different field, Johnson told a Congress rumbling with more complaints than praise that it has a built-in remedy if it thinks he has handled the Vietnamese war unwisely or improperly.

That would be to invoke a provision for cancellation in a 1964 resolution, adopted after U.S. warships were attacked in the Gulf of Tonkin. The resolution overwhelmingly backed the President in preventing further aggression.

Not since March 9 had a nationwide audience been able to look and listen in on a Johnson news conference from living rooms and rocking chairs across the country.

To the extent American counsel is sought and advice followed, "We are going to do everything we can to see that we have an orderly, free and fair election" in Vietnam, said Johnson.

As for his present assessment of the Vietnam war, the President said that:

"Our policy in Vietnam is the same; we are there to deter aggression."

Air strikes within 10 miles of Red China do not, in fact "pose any threat" to that nation, are not intended to and "we believe that Peking knows the United States does not seek to widen the war in Vietnam."

Four of his top generals think that what he called the charge that the war is a stalemate "is nothing more than propaganda."

More and more, the enemy "is less anxious to engage our troops in combat," perhaps because "of the losses he has suffered and the position in which he finds himself."

Getting into domestic affairs, many of them feeling the impact of the cost of war, Johnson said:

About half the 100 administration measures have passed Congress and he expects many of the rest to come through in the closing rush. So he didn't seem to be buying a reporter's observation that his domestic program appeared to be foundering.

Reagan Again Says 'No' To Presidency

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan, mentioned as a strong contender for the 1968 Republican presidential nomination, reaffirmed yesterday that he is not a candidate for either the No. 1 or No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket.

At his first news conference since undergoing surgery July 31 for removal of bladder stones, Reagan said his role at the 1968 Republican convention would be a favorite son candidate to see that California "will have a voice commensurate with its size."

The governor said he was flattered by a recent poll that showed he would be a strong contender for the nomination but added, "I am not a candidate."

He denied his decision to curtail out of state speaking engagements had any connection with the GOP presidential race.

The governor said he has three speaking engagements scheduled in September, including "fund raisers" in South Carolina and Wisconsin.

Reagan, under attack for the $210 million cut in Medi-Cal benefits ordered earlier this week, said the problem was caused by "hasty legislation" at the close of the session and that the state legislature should share some of the blame.

The governor said he hoped members of the conservative United Republicans of California would reject some of the resolutions approved by its 16-man Board of Governors last weekend.

He said he particularly disagreed with a resolution urging Congress to consider impeachment proceedings against Johnson.

Asked to comment on a speech by William Penn Patrick of San Rafael at the UROC meeting in which the wealthy cosmetics manufacturer said Chief Justice Earl Warren should be hanged, the governor said, "I don't think it should be mentioned."

Berkeley City Council Against The 'Two' Wars

BERKELEY (AP)—A resolution approved by a 6-1 vote of the Berkeley City Council declares the nation cannot fight the war in Vietnam and poverty at home at the same time.

"It is aiding and abetting the enemy and is an attempt to subvert our government," argued DeBonis.

Mayor Wallace Johnson worked for a consensus among the council members on the resolution statement. Some members said they did not oppose the war but did want to express the conviction that poverty programs were suffering because of the Vietnam conflict.

MEDI-CAL FEES

$70,000 Average For 1,200 Doctors

Half of the $167 million paid to doctors by the state-operated Medi-Cal program in its first 16 months has gone to 1,200 of the state's physicians and surgeons, it was disclosed in Sacramento yesterday.

These 1,200 doctors averaged $70,000 each in state fees, and about 300 of them apparently received from $80,000 to $110,000 each, reported Carel Mulder, director of the Office of Health Care Services.

He said Medi-Cal records showed about 300 doctors with "patterns of practice" going beyond the norms for their communities. He mentioned unneeded surgery and other treatments such as injections not required by the patients, as having been given patients who were under the state aid program.

He declined to identify any of the "new rich" doctors.

Policing of the Medi-Cal program to guard against overpayments is by California Physicians Service (Blue Shield). It may refer apparent overcharges to county medical societies for whatever disciplinary action they can take against the doctors.

Dr. Arthur R. Ablin of San Rafael, president of the Marin Medical Society, said today: "At no time has CPS called us to say there has been an instance of exorbitant charging in this county."

Dr. Ablin said he had learned at a California Medical Association committee meeting that the statewide association had 300 to 320 doctors under suspicion of overcharging for Medi-Cal patients.

"Our society would welcome any communication from the state or CPS on any suspicion of overcharging," he said. "We have the machinery in our society to deal with it."

Each county medical society has a review committee to examine any Medi-Cal claim that appears unusually high, Ablin said.

Mulder said he was not charging any doctor with unethical practices, but added: "We are dealing with a few people who are less responsible than we would expect of them. The average physician is cooperative and is not abusing the program. We want to make sure this does not get out of perspective."

He conceded that some of the $70,000-up billings might represent clinics rather than individual physicians.

The disclosure came as debate continued over the Reagan Administration's announcement it would cut back services under the Medi-Cal program, which provides assistance to 1.5 million Californians, because costs are running more than budgeted.

Muller said a provision of the cutback order should prevent further escalation of fees. This provision freezes fees at those in effect Jan. 1.

Search Failing In Finding Pal Of Slain Hippie

Marin County sheriff's officers today appeared at a dead end in their search for Charlie Garcia Jr., former drug offender they believe can help them in their investigation of the murder of William (Superspade) Thomas.

Inspector Harold Sleezer reported no leads following the publication yesterday of a photograph and identification details of 31-year-old Garcia, known to be an associate of the victim.

"We've received no calls with information from the public," he said. "No one appears to know where he is. We thought he might surrender himself for questioning." Garcia is not considered a suspect in the murder at this stage.

Thomas, reportedly a dealer in LSD and marijuana, was killed two weeks ago. His body was found in a sleeping bag at Point Reyes Aug. 6.

Plea Date Set On Joy-Riding

Plea entry by Raymond J. Cosgrove, 48, charged with misdemeanor joy-riding in another's car, was scheduled yesterday in Marin Municipal Court for 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Cosgrove, San Francisco real estate broker who also gives his address as Rancho Rafael Motel in Ignacio, allegedly took the car Thursday from Marin Bay Lincoln-Mercury in San Rafael. San Rafael police arrested him that day asleep in the car, they said.

Open Letter Demands Sumbardo Resignation

A campaign to unseat Fairfax City Administrator David J. Sumbardo and City Engineer Richard J. Nelson entered another stage today with distribution of an open letter to Fairfax property owners.

The letter, originated by Max Friedman, owner of Marin Town and Country Club, calls for pressure on the city council to get resignations from the two.

If the men don't resign, Friedman said today, "we'll have to start a referendum" to remove them from office.

"When we talk to the councilmen individually they all agree," Friedman said, "but when they get together we can't depend on them."

The letter is being circulated for signatures and copies will be sent to the councilmen, Friedman said. Other signers include Antoinette Ghiringhelli, Floyd Elliott, and Silvio Ruffino.

The letter attacks "big talk and blue sued shoe ideas of replacing the ghettos, building civic centers, city halls, redevelopments of businesses and industries."

Friedman said he has no objection to the council-manager form of city government "if they get someone qualified" to handle engineer and administrator jobs combined.

The radio said rebellious elements ignored the denunciation and defied the authorities of the Kweichow provisional revolutionary committee, a triple alliance of military leaders, pro-Mao party cadres and government bureaucrats and "revolutionaries."

It said after the rally "these counter revolutionaries again and again directed the spearhead of their attack against the army and against the revolutionaries."

It said the pro-Mao revolutionaries "could not stand idly by" and struck back "and attacked the powerholders taking the capitalist road"—supporters of President Liu Shao-chi.

The unusual onslaught of mice has been given several explanations.

The Sarajevo Biological Institute believed hunters and farmers have killed off most of the Bosnian foxes that normally feed on the mice.

Gefeo Vucinic, chief agricultural inspector for the Sarajevo region, said he thought the mice had come out of the forests and into the fields because there were not enough nuts on forest trees this year to feed them adequately.

Scouts From Belgium Begin Marin Tours

Tours of Marin beauty spots were being planned today for the 69 Belgian Boy Scouts and their leaders, who arrived for a 10-day stay with individual county families last night.

The boys are returning from the world Scout Jamboree at Farragut, Ida., and during their Marin stopover will live with local families, attending service club meetings and other community events.

Among the host families are the Foster Mahoods of Corte Madera. Mrs. Mahood said today: "We have two scouts staying with us and they are very keen to see the county. They speak perfect English."

The scouts are scheduled to meet again as a group Tuesday for a tour of Marin County Civic Center and other events include a barbecue and campfire at Fairfax later in the week.

Employees Picket Over No Pay Hike

EUREKA (UPI) — More than 200 Humboldt County employees picketed the county building for two hours yesterday to protest the board of supervisors' failure to give them a 5 per cent salary increase.

Supervisors, however, showed little inclination to grant the employees' demands. Said one: "The county's economic climate is in such bad shape, I can't see how our employees can even be considering pay hikes."

Hoskins was reported in good condition and under heavy guard in the St. Cloud Hospital. He had been shot in the chest and abdomen.

Authorities said Friday that a major question facing them in the case was how Hoskins' wife and children were kept inside the farm home where they burned. The question still has not been fully answered.

Hoskins, a deacon in the Church of Christ at nearby Kimball, and a member of a church entertainment group called the Gospel Guitars, first told authorities that he and his wife were watching television about midnight when they heard what sounded like a door slamming.

Hoskins told authorities he walked out onto the porch and was overpowered by five or six men who blindfolded him with a towel and "bullied" him. Hoskins had related how the men tied him to the crossbar of a clothesline, shot him and set fire to his house. He said he never lost consciousness.

Lahr said today that Hoskins has admitted the story was "a complete hoax."

Hair Roots Can Tell Of Malnutrition

BERKELEY (SS) — The condition of a person's hair roots can show whether or not he is suffering from protein malnutrition. Examination of the root bulb and the external root sheath offers a quick and inexpensive tool for public health workers, especially in areas where sophisticated equipment is not readily available, say three nutritional scientists at the University of California at Berkeley.

They tried the method on eight men in good physical condition, keeping them in a research ward for three months for a series of 15-day experiments.

The men, aged 24 to 29, were fed a liquid formula diet three times daily, which provided either 75 grams of protein per man per day in the form of egg albumen, or no protein at all. In the latter case, dextrimaltose was added to equal the calories of the egg albumen.

The diet remained at 2,800 calories per man per day throughout the study.

Samples of 100 hairs were plucked from the back of each subject's head and examined in a dissecting microscope. Successive samples were taken from slightly different locations both in the protein-deprived men and in the controls. The ones deprived of protein had less hair color and the root bulbs were atrophied.

Loss Light To House In Grass Blaze

Sparks from a grass fire above Bret Harte yesterday ignited a home and set dry grass near another burning, before San Rafael and Marin County firemen halted the blaze.

County firemen were called at 12:09 p.m. when the blaze was reported just east of the city limits, near California Park. San Rafael firemen joined as the blaze neared the city line.

The fire, extinguished in half an hour, burned about one acre on the property of Joseph Cattaneo at 151 Orange Street, firemen said.

Sparks caught the roof of the home of Wendy Bouscal at 89 Rose Lane, and burned a hole about two square feet. Near the residence of John Alioto, 112 Blossom Court, sparks ignited a small patch of grass.

San Rafael Deputy Fire Chief Francis Rogers said cause of the blaze remained unknown.

About 180 members of San Rafael's Company M, Third Battalion, 23rd Marines, arrived today at the Coronado Naval Amphibious Base in San Diego County to begin their annual two weeks' active training.

OBITUARIES

Maria U. Gargiulo Dies At 80

Funeral for Maria Urzua Gargiulo, retired co-owner of Maria's Pueblo, in San Rafael, the county's first Mexican restaurant, will be Monday at 11 a.m. at the Harry M. Williams Mortuary, San Rafael.

Mrs. Gargiulo died Thursday in a local hospital after a short illness. She was 80.

She was active until her illness a week ago and had recently returned from a trip to Mexico.

Born in Ciudad Guzman, Mexico, she was a daughter of Juan Marin Urzua, who lived to be 106 years old, and who had come to Mexico in 1864 as an official of the court of Ferinand Maximilian, emperor of Mexico.

In her native country, Mrs. Gargiulo was a school teacher, a government employee, and was a nurse during the 1914-19 Mexican Revolution. It was during this time she met her first husband, who was killed in 1918.

In 1920, she left Mexico for San Francisco where she was employed as a domestic worker and later as a Spanish governess. Three years later, she was married to Joe F. Gargiulo, and the couple moved to San Rafael.

Mrs. Gargiulo started a small take-out Mexican food business in 1927 and 10 years later built the present Marie's Pueblo at 4 Bayview Street. She and her husband operated the business until 10 years ago when their youngest son, Frank, took over the operation.

Apart from her business interests, she won several awards for oil paintings. She was also active with the Marin Society for the Blind, Marin County Easter Seal Society, and was a member of San Rafael Methodist Church.

She is survived by her husband; a daughter, Rose Hiatt of San Anselmo; four sons, Ricardo D. Urzua of Mexico, Michael A. Lopez of San Rafael, Joseph D. Gargiulo of Novato, and Frank A. Gargiulo of San Rafael; 12 grandchildren, and three great grandchildren.

Entombment will be in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael. The family prefer memorial contributions to the adult recreation unit of Marin County Easter Seal Society.

Lava Forms Into Strange Rope Shapes

By SCIENCE SERVICE

Lava, the molten rock oozing out of volcanoes from the earth's interior, sometimes solidifies into long twisted shapes looking like rope or cable. This is called pahoehoe, a Hawaiian term that is now used by geologists throughout the world. It is also simply called corded lava.

The strange twists are produced in highly fluid basaltic lavas as they flow down the sides of the volcano. The outside surface of the flow cools and congeals, but the still hot molten rock beneath flows on, dragging with it the hardening crust which is folded, twisted and molded as it is pulled along.

Sometimes the surface is covered with wrinkles, and sometimes it is smooth, satiny and even glossy. The whole ropy mass becomes solidified into hard rock when the lava finally cools down completely.

There is another type flow which is exceedingly rough and jagged, with sharp spiny fragments of hardened lava sticking up. This type of lava is called aa, also a Hawaiian name. Some scientists declare the name comes from the holler of a person walking barefooted across a jagged lava field: ah! ah! Aa is formed from stiffer, more viscous lava with a thick brittle crust that becomes broken and heaped up as it is carried along by the molten lava beneath.

Basalt is one of the three types of lava ejected from volcanoes. It is quite dark, and is more fluid than the other types, with a lesser amount of silica, volcanic gasses are able to escape quite readily from this molten lava, and thus do not build up pressures.

"FUN" WAS the key word in the Marucelli fashion show for fall in Rome. It may not have made the audience laugh, but this monkey fur fashion does join the ranks of "Fun Furs." Matching the coat is a hat that could pass for a wig and summing up the look are high boots.

FOR FALL FROM ITALY

Italian designer Eleanora Garnett likes to mark the natural waistline in her fall collection. And for this bright red wool coat she chooses a narrow black leather belt to cinch it. Completing the Garnett look are high laced boots and a black fox Cossack hat.

Optical Illusion Can Help

By EUNICE FARMER

I dearly love the double-breasted clothes, but feel that they make me look fat and dumpy. Is this my imagination, or does it matter this much?
—MRS. V.R.

DEAR MRS. V.R.:

Ordinarily, you will have to watch the effect of a double-breasted garment, whether it's a dress, coat or suit. There are several ways that you can create an optical illusion however, that won't have this effect.

Use more buttons, smaller in size than a few large ones. The spacing or width between buttons is very important also. The closer the buttons, the more your eye will go up and down, rather than across. It is also possible to have a double-breasted garment and place buttons only on one side. This will give you an asymmetrical look which is very slenderizing. See the sketches and decide for yourself!

DEAR EUNICE:

Someday I hope to be making my own clothes with the help of your sewing tips as well as your enthusiasm. However, in the meantime, the best I can do is alter my ready-mades! I bought a very expensive suit at the end of the season last spring and was amazed to find how short the darts were in the skirt. They don't seem to taper enough and there is a bulge at the end of each one. Is it all right to simply lengthen them so they will appear similar to the ones that appear on my other clothes?—MRS. G.H.

DEAR MRS. G.H.:

Clothes should always be altered to fit the individual. However, in this case, I think you are confusing style lines with fit. With more darts than ordinarily used, as well as shorter ones, you will find a slight belled shape to your skirt. In other words, your skirt will appear slightly rounded below the jacket. I think most slight style changes such as this are a little difficult to get used to, but we usually accept them after we see more of them. Since your suit was very expensive, it will be more high fashion. For this reason, I would not change it.

DEAR EUNICE:

I think every woman dreams of wearing clothes that are a little dressy and still most of us don't have any place to wear them. Do you have any suggestion as to how this can be done without making us look overdressed?—MRS. O.L.W.

DEAR MRS. O.L.W.:

You are right, it is fun to really dress up and since it's not the general order of the day, we often feel a little self-conscious the first time we do. I would suggest, while it is still early in the season, you get together with your girl friends and agree to stick together on this.

Plan your little dinner parties, bridge parties, or whatever, with the idea of dressing up. This is one of the greatest talking points for those of us who sew. It certainly doesn't cost as much as going out and buying an expensive dress, and the fun and excitement you get from looking like a queen is worth it.

VEILS TOSSED ASIDE

Pakistan's Women Revolutionizing

By LEMMY PINNA

KARACHI (UPI) — Harem walls have crumbled, veils been tossed aside as Pakistan's women revolutionize an entire nation.

During their two decades of painful emergence onto the national scene, the women have undergone a radical change. Demure and self-effacing, they now possess a drive that no longer will be stopped.

In the process of establishing their rights, the women put a couple of dents in the political armor of Field Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan.

IT WAS A WOMAN who gave strongman Ayub some of his worst moments in 1965. She lost the presidential election, but 83-year-old Fatima Jinnah, sister of Mohammed Ali Jinnah, founder of Pakistan, has not lost her voice.

Frail and irascible, she often makes statements that have caused Ayub to flinch. Other women have followed her example.

THE FEMALE editor of a Karachi magazine once carried out a campaign against the present regime with such effectiveness that the weekly was muzzled for six months.

Except for such distressing moments, underscoring the orthodox Moslem's conviction that women seldom should be seen and never heard, Ayub is known to get on well with them.

Ironically, it was the enlightened family law ordinance, established by President Ayub, which made the emancipation of the female in Pakistan a constitutional fact.

Today, Pakistani women are looking to the future by consolidating their achievements of the past.

They have been appointed ambassadors and ministers. They are elected to the National Assembly. Hands that once rocked the cradle are reaching out to organize the nation's chaotic affairs.

THERE ARE women lawyers and judges, doctors and economists. In science and technology, Pakistani women now are competing on equal terms with their men.

Nearly 20,000 women, forming the All Pakistan Women's Association (APWA), dominate the country's social and welfare programs.

Born of a tragic necessity caused by the partition of the sub-continent, APWA was founded by Begum Liaquat Ali Khan in 1959 to care for thousands of destitute refugees.

Since then, APWA has recruited some of the nation's most progressive begums to become Pakistan's leading champion of female rights.

Though concerned more with welfare and social improvements, APWA's organized talent has reached into all levels of national life.

Its members have penetrated the most retarded rural areas to establish educational programs. APWA shops are show windows for the country's cottage industries. And fashion shows organized by members are promoting Pakistani textiles.

Stylist Creates Wigs From Colored Paper And Feathers

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — In the old Mother Goose rhyme, Jack went to bed to heal his head with vinegar and brown paper.

Somehow vinegar has been lost in the translation, but brown paper is "healing" feminine heads in the form of wigs, and wiglets.

Travis Johnson, head hair stylist for Neiman-Marcus, decided that hair styles should participate in the paper dress fashion trend. He created from brown paper a wig of long, giddy curls, with a few feathers tucked in for effect.

HE RECOMMENDS the wig for wear after swimming, or with any casual dress—paper or not. For more formal occasions, Travis recommends a longer wig of colored paper and feathers. The curls should match the print of the dress—or else provide contrast with the color of the hair.

He visualizes a fountain of blue, green, pink and orange paper curls for a vivid brunette, for instance. A blonde or a red head would get a cooler color combination for her paper curls.

India Experiences Related By Couple

Staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kent O. Seymour, in Mill Valley are their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kaplan Werner, who have just returned from two years in India.

In the fall they will be living in Illinois, where Mr. Werner will teach philosophy at the University of Illinois.

Both were doing work on doctorate degrees which they expect to receive this year from Harvard University. Susan engaged in research for her thesis in anthropology while her husband worked on his thesis in philosophy.

Their first three months in India were spent in Poona, but most of the time they were in Bhubaneswar in the state of Orissa, where Susan was able to do a comparative study of child-bearing practices in the old and new parts of the city.

She says she has a great deal of analysis of her data to do before she can say anything about the results, except that in the modernized part of the city a little progress is being made on control of family size. The change is coming very slowly, she says.

The country was very depressing, she noted, but the people themselves were very interesting, friendly and outgoing. They were easy to work with so that she felt free to wander in and out of their houses, which in the poor section were nothing but mud huts with no furniture and everything done on the floor, including cooking around a fire.

Some families had as many as 10 to 14 children, she said, and the women were kept busy all day long cooking, cleaning and getting their water from wells.

The people lived mostly on rice from their own little paddies, with some vegetables and fish, but almost no meat. Malnutrition is widespread, and many children have worms.

In spite of these conditions, she says, they are not depressed and are generally happy.

The Werners were in the part of the city which had water and electricity, but it seldom worked. By American standards there was practically no food available and no variety. Natives could not eat beef, but the Werners obtained beef from a nearby Muslem village and there were always plenty of potatoes, onions and eggs. They didn't care for rice.

Co-op Marin Plans Barbecue

Co-op Marin will have a barbecue for its member-owners tomorrow, 2 to 5 p.m. Each family will bring a salad and barbecued chicken will be served.

There will be a demonstration of barbecue techniques by S. I. Hayakawa, Fred Cherry, Gerald Rubin, Tony Bossbrink, George Hoffman and P. T. Perry Jr. Music will be provided by members Renee Sagar, autoharp; Fay Jensen Anderson, recorder; Scott Nicholl, banjo. There will be folk dancing by the Rikidum Israeli dancers.

Also included in the program will be an exhibition of Tai Chi Shuan. Lars Williamson will be the master of ceremonies.

Told of tonight's party, Mr. Little said he didn't need a thing unless "somebody wants to give me a new Cadillac."

HEADING FOR a wedding in Denver on Sept. 2 are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lindsay of Belvedere. Mrs. Lindsay's son, Ned Modica, will marry Lillian Pritchard at the Park Hill Methodist Church in Denver on that date. Ned's twin brother, Guy Modica, will be best man, and David Leibert of Belvedere, head usher at the marriage rite. In the family party traveling to Colorado will be Ned's grandmother, Mrs. Guy MacVicar of Belvedere and his younger brother, Christopher Lindsay. Lillian is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byron J. Pritchard of Denver. The couple, both students at the University of Colorado, will come to California on their wedding trip. The Lindsays will honor them at a garden reception at their home in Belvedere in mid-September.

MRS. ART KNUDSEN of Larkspur was honored with a farewell luncheon at the Loch Lomond home of Mrs. A. Thomas Panages this week. Fourteen friends attended the event. The Knudsens, who are the parents of Kim, Lisa, Carl and Eric, are being transferred to Palos Verdes on Sept. 1. Mrs. Knudsen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gallatin of Greenbrae.

IT WAS yachting night at the Ice Follies Thursday when 120 Corinthian yacht club members attended the show en masse. The evening, arranged by Elmer Hemberger, was a benefit for the club's youth sailing program.

Today 100 members of Bel Marin Keys Yacht Club will come by sail and power boat to Corinthian's Harbor in Tiburon. They will arrive in the afternoon, stay on for dinner and dancing and spend the night on board their yachts.

A BLUE Roman striped hostess gown won for Lynn Baker the award for the most popular design voted by the audience Wednesday at Valerie Ann's fashion show at Maple Lawn. Winner of an original Valerie Ann creation in the audience was little five-year-old Sarah Reed, daughter of the David Reeds of New York, formerly of Mill Valley, who are visiting there for the summer.

THE LESLIE WELLINGTONS are home in Mill Valley from a trip to Japan they began on June 30. They visited Kyoto, Nikko, Tokyo and Kamakura. A highlight for them was seeing again their friend, Jiro Jamaguchi, who was a famed Japanese Davis Cup team member now living just outside Tokyo. A first trip to the country for Mrs. Wellington, it was wholly delightful, she says, in every way except that it was too westernized. This was her only disappointment.

THE ROBERT M. Gunns of Sausalito have a house full of company. Staying with them are their son, Spec. 4/C Bruce Gunn, who is home on leave from Fort Lewis, Wash., and his stepbrother, Peter English, who has returned from the Transpac Race to Honolulu. Thursday Mrs. Gunn's nephew, Peter Herbert, with his wife and two children arrived from Miami, Fla., for a short visit. He is the commerical manager in the southeast for Alitalia Airlines.

MRS. ALTHEYA Youngman was hostess at a luncheon at her home in Sausalito Thursday honoring Vera Schultz, former Marin County Supervisor and well known conservationist. It was also a planning session for a luncheon and program to be held in early September at the home of Mrs. Constant M. Van Vlierden in Sausalito when key women in the Bay Area will be guests. The purpose will be to explain the importance of the proposed Atheneum cultural complex to be built in Marincello to everyone concerned with the arts. Mrs. Schultz will talk and show slides taken during her recent tour of new European cities that show new developments in planning that include cultural facilities.

Clausen Sees Local Aid Program Approach

Rep. Donald H. Clausen, R-First District, yesterday suggested that congress may be getting away from centralized federal aid programs and leaning toward a local approach through private enterprise.

Addressing nearly 200 persons at a luncheon in Novato, the Congressman said he detected several "turning points" in Washington during the last month of the recent session.

He told the guests of the Novato Chamber of Commerce and local service clubs, "As a society, we must accept the responsibility for what is happening in our country today."

Without being specific, he predicted a move by Congress to provide low-cost housing with accompanying programs to allow Negroes to buy them. He said it had been shown that Negroes protect their own homes when trouble breaks out.

He said he and others are working on providing mass-produced housing comparable to the mass production of automobiles.

He also cited a shift in policy in dealing with unemployment problems: "We're turning the corner towards providing job training programs which, if refused without good reason, would disqualify one from unemployment compensation."

But he emphasized that "independent and private sectors will have to commit themselves" in support of such local training programs.

On the international scene, he predicted war escalation with the South Vietnamese taking the offensive after their elections. "We're too over-extended already. What we need is an all-Asian security force," he said, adding, "Don't be surprised with what will take place after the elections there."

Returns Slow On Question Of Salaries

Returns up to Yesterday were slow and indecisive in balloting of the San Anselmo Town Meeting Project Committee on whether to circulate an initiative petition on councilmen's salaries, meeting chairman James F. Reed reported.

Reed said only 41 of the committee's 140 members had returned ballots last week and the vote was 20 for starting the initiative, 17 against and four with no opinion.

The initiative would be an attempt to put on the April ballot the question of whether councilmen should be paid.

Councilmen, now receiving $150 a month salaries, agreed to put on the ballot the question of whether the salaries should be reduced to a maximum of $75 a month, but refused to put on the ballot the question of whether they should be paid at all.

Reed had hoped to close the voting yesterday, but decided to extend it to next Friday.

Storer Request To Udall Is Clarified

A typographical error in early copies of Thursday's Independent-Journal changed the meaning of a story in which Thomas T. Storer, chairman of the Marin County Board of Supervisors, wrote to Secretary of the Interior Stuart L. Udall about private development at the Point Reyes National Seashore.

Storer told Udall the supervisors hoped federal funds would be appropriated soon to purchase the portion of the seashore still in private hands.

San Rafael Council May Pass Budget

San Rafael City Council will consider adopting the 1967-68 budget and setting the tax rate at its meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in the City Hall.

The Council will also hold a public hearing on the proposal to change the name of Main Drive, between Pt. San Pedro Road and Knight Drive, to Castelwood Drive and to provide for continuous numbering.

Dates for two other public hearings may also be set. They would be for the proposed annexation of 3.06 acres in the Northbay area and the application by Montecito Properties for a zoning variance.

Other items on the Council agenda will be the proposed charter revision ordinance fixing the amount of bonding for appointed and elected officials; second phase in the widening project on South San Pedro Road; and the proposed reconstruction of Meyer Road.

Battery Charge Pleas Entered

Frederick Washington, 21, and David Barrows, 22, pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to charges of battery on police officers.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. scheduled a joint preliminary hearing for Wednesday.

Washington, of 409 Drake Avenue, Marin City, allegedly assaulted Sheriff's Deputy L. T. Thrall on Thursday after the officer cited him for running a stop sign in Marin City.

Transit Boss To Be Named On Tuesday

Marin County Transit District directors will name a manager for the district at 5 p.m. Tuesday, meeting after the regular session of the county board of supervisors.

The transit district board had scheduled a meeting last night at the Civic Center for the appointment, but postponed it until Tuesday, reported County Administrator Alan Bruce.

The man to be named has been chosen, Bruce disclosed. He identified him only as a New York transportation consultant, but said he was one of two candidates interviewed by the transit district board on Tuesday night.

Annex Hearing Monday Night

Whether annexation of unincorporated areas of the peninsula will stop or go, will be decided Monday at a continued council hearing on written protests by property owners.

The meeting will be at 8 p.m. in city hall.

If protests amount to 50 per cent of assessed valuation, the annexation wheels will grind to a halt.

If not, the council can proceed with setting a special election for annexation, according to Russell Melquist, assistant to the city manager.

Melquist said the council on Monday may also alter boundaries of the area to be annexed, but by no more than five per cent, if it feels this would be desirable.

Marin School Board Groups Set Sessions

Three Marin County Board of Education committees will meet Monday at the Marin County superintendent of schools office, 201 Tamal Vista Boulevard, Corte Madera.

The administrative services committee and the special education committee will both meet at 7:30 p.m., the educational services committee at 8:30 p.m.

The administrative committee will consider hiring of two special education teachers and an accountant and will review legislation recently signed by Gov. Ronald Reagan, affecting education.

Up for approval by the special education committee will be a course of study for special education classes. The committee will also consider a recommendation that speech therapist Gracie Grove devote more time to the trainable mentally retarded program next year.

Reports are also expected on three new special education classes for next year, one in Southern Marin in Reed School District, another at Point Reyes Station for the West Marin School District; the third, a class for the deaf and hard-of-hearing at the junior high school level, according to Asst. Supt. Stanley H. Friese.

In the educational services committee meeting at 8:30 p.m., director of instruction Lawrence A. Lindberg will report several institutes and teacher workshops.

Painting Display

Paintings by Oakland artist William Hupp will be displayed at the American Savings and Loan Association Northgate Shopping Center, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Fridays until Sept. 1.

Drunken Driving

Woodrow Wilson Clardy, 54, of Boyes Hot Springs, Sonoma County, was fined $150 and placed on a year's probation yesterday in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving. California Highway Patrol arrested him Tuesday on Highway 101.

Two, Not One, High School Bond Elections

One bond issue in San Rafael Eelmentary School District and two in San Rafael High School District will be placed before voters on Oct. 24.

The Independent-Journal, in a story Aug. 2 on calling of the bond election by the San Rafael Board of Education, made it appear there would be two issues in the elementary district and one in the high school district. This was in error.

The issues to be presented are these:

Elementary School District — $3,060,000 to build Glenwood Middle School, buy a school site in Peacock Gap, and make additions and improvements at several other schools.

High School District (A) — $2,025,000 to expand Terra Linda High School to what is now considered its ultimate capacity, bring the old gymnasium at San Rafael High School up to Field Act standards, and buy a site for a third high school.

High School District (B) — $5,5000,000 to build a high school on the third site which will be purchased if the first high school bond issue passes.

Three Drivers Given Drunken Driving Fines

Three men were sentenced in Marin Municipal Court yesterday for drunken driving.

William Edward Rickets, 57, of 321 Greenfield Avenue, San Anselmo, was given 30 days in county jail, fined $250, and placed on two years probation. Fairfax police arrested him March 7 on Pastori Avenue. He had a prior conviction.

Calvin Coolidge Matthies, 39, of 39 Greenfield Avenue, San Rafael, was fined $250, given five days in jail, and placed on a year's probation. San Rafael police arrested him April 2 on B Street.

Kella Eugene Lester, 58, of 225 Solano Street, San Rafael, was fined $115 and placed on six months probation. San Rafael police arrested him Aug. 9 on Fifth Avenue.

Corte Madera Tax Rate Is 99 Cents—History's Lowest

In double-quick time last night, Corte Madera Town Council fixed the fiscal 1968 city tax rate at 99 cents per $100 assessed valuation — and became the first council in the 51-year history of the town to keep the rate under $1.

The new rate will be five cents below last year's figure of $1.04. Property taxes are expected to produce $223,704, compared with the $198,057 total last year, because of increased assessed valuation.

Only four minutes were taken to fix the rate and members spent more time earlier to resist a last-minute temptation to increase the total budget, already set at $778,776.

The subject was curb pond correction priorities, and the council agreed to keep to the recommended list for next year and not add another $535 repair job requested by a resident.

Clara-Belle Hamilton of 47 Lakeside Drive said she had been trying for 10 years to get the council to eliminate the pond outside her home.

Members sympathized, but said her case would be corrected next year only if sufficient money were left over after four other jobs were done.

After discussing a poll of residents of Sausalito Street, the council agreed to a request for no parking on the west side of the street between Tamalpais and Manzanita avenues.

Next regular meeting was set for Sept. 5 instead of the usual first Monday of the month because of Labor Day.

Gasoline Taken

Richard Olson reported to Mill Valley police that between 10:30 p.m. Thursday and 7:30 a.m. yesterday, someone siphoned a large amount of gasoline from his car while parked in front of his house at 305 Ethel Avenue.

Fullerton Club To Quit Council

FULLERTON (AP) — The Fullerton Democratic Club has voted to pull out of the California Democratic Council, Rene Steinhauer said Friday.

Steinhauer, president of the Fullerton club, predicted other clubs also would quit the statewide group because, "They're disenchanted with the leadership."

He blamed the council's stand against U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war. Its "peace convention" is scheduled Sept. 30 in Long Beach.

Auto Is Stolen

A 1956 white and blue Chevrolet with no license plates was stolen Monday from the Ark parking lot at Waldo Point, Marin County sheriff's deputies said today. Report of the theft was delayed because the owner, Fred Martinez, who operates the Ark, believed a buyer had driven the car away.

Burns Claims He Can Keep His Top Job

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republicans now hold exactly half the seats in the state Senate, but Democratic chieftain Hugh M. Burns, doesn't intend to give up his job as president pro tempore.

The veteran senator from Fresno said yesterday that Republican senators have indicated to him they do not expect to attempt to reorganize the Senate this year.

CONFIDENCE

And Burns said he probably will stand for re-election as pro tem when the legislature convenes for its new session in January.

"I have confidence I can win 21 votes over to my side," Burns said.

Republicans gained a 20-20 split in the Senate membership Tuesday when Judge Milton Marks outpolled Democratic Assemblyman John L. Burton for the San Francisco seat vacated by the death of J. Eugene McAteer last May.

The GOP now holds nominal control of the Senate due to the fact Lt. Gov. Robert Finch is a Republican. He can cast a tie-breaking vote in the event of a party-line ballot.

FIRST RUMBLES

The first concrete indication that Republicans want a bigger voice in running the Senate came when Sen. Howard Way, R-Exeter, the Senate Agriculture Committee chairman, said he was available for the job of pro tem.

Burns, however, had a different impression.

"According to all my information, the Republican membership is perfectly willing to let this session finish up (without reorganization)," Burns said.

Another factor working against a reorganization drive by the GOP next month will be the fact their entire membership won't be on hand. Sen. Sen. Clark L. Bradley, R - San Jose, has passed the word he won't finish his honeymoon until the veto session is over.

While the Republicans may not wrest the pro tem's office from Burns, they may receive a larger share of the important committee chairmanships.

The Democrats now hold the chairs of the three most powerful committees — rules, finance and governmental efficiency. Burns hinted he might be agreeable to giving the Republicans a larger share.

Crime News Injunction Overturned

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A Superior Court injunction, which would have limited the information in criminal cases that could be released to news media, was overturned yesterday by the State Court of Appeal.

In a 38-page opinion the court held that Superior Judge Alfred Gitelson lacked authority to issue a blanket order that sharply curtailed statements by police and prosecutors to newsmen between a suspect's arrest and arraignment.

Under the injunction only the suspect's name, age, residence, occupation, marital status and the charge against him could be released. Barred by Gitelson's order would have been such information as the prior criminal record of the suspect, confessions and results of lie detector tests.

Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union Obtained the injunction last Feb. 23, but Gitelson stipulated that it would not become effective until it had been reviewed by the appeals court.

ACLU Attorney A.L. Wirin said the decision would be appealed.

Charges Vary In Fight Case

William Gabriel LePera, 31, of 376 Sausalito Boulevard, Sausalito, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a variety of charges arising from a fracas at Gatsby's Bar in Sausalito Thursday night.

He is accused of disturbing the peace; battery on Arthur P. Lang, 23, of 41 Kappas Yacht Harbor; destroying property in Gatsby's, and ripping up the county jail's padded cell.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. scheduled plea entry for 1:30 p.m. next Friday.

COLLISION DANGER CITED

The U.S. Coast Guard has released this picture to stress its warning that more than 50 per cent of boat accidents this year will be collisions. This one happened on the Lake of the Ozarks, Mo., on May 6, killing one passenger in the cabin cruiser and injuring eight persons. The cruiser's ramming by a 16-foot runabout was blamed on excessive speed of the smaller boat, combined with poor visibility. (UPI Telephoto)

Restless Citizens Of Fairbanks Begin Moving Into Flooded Homes

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UPI)—Restless citizens of flood-stricken Fairbanks moved back into their homes today, ignoring official warnings to wait until the buildings have been inspected.

"Home is home, and a lot of people are determined to get back and clean up," said Pat Ryan, top aide to Gov. Walter Hickel.

But state officials still urged the 18,000 refugees from the week-long disaster to wait.

It may be a long wait for many. Work crews with tons of equipment are poised for a mammoth cleanup as soon as the Chena River drops another foot.

The river was still five feet above flood stage and dropping about a quarter-inch an hour. A drop of another foot was needed to launch the major clean-up campaign, officials said.

Ryan admitted that the water's slow recession is "a great disappointment" for officials, who know they must restore Fairbanks to near normal before winter temperatures set in. Temperatures drop to 60 below zero here.

The governor's office placed damages at more than $300 million from the flood and said that the official death toll still was three, despite reports that four others had perished.

As higher areas of the downtown emerged from under water, a few groceries opened and some store owners shoveled sand from their basements.

The ebbing waters gave an ugly preview of things to come, exposing blocks of gravel and chunks of pavement in the downtown streets. One man walking in shotetop-high water suddenly fell up to his waist in water.

Another man put a sign on a downtown street: "The 10th Ave. branch of the Chena River."

Outlying areas where the Tanana River also went on the rampage over thousands of square miles were checked by Governor Hickel, Army engineers and other federal officials sent to the scene under a presidential disaster declaration.

Ryan said they found no major problems. "We had every reason to believe there were none but the governor wanted to be sure."

Ryan returned glumly to the Fairbanks situation.

"Time is of the essence. It's painful to be as ready to function as we are and have to wait on the water that is running through the city."

Indian Faces Prison; Won't Fight In War

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A Shoshone Indian from Northeastern Nevada who refused to "fight in the white man's war in Vietnam" today faced a five-year term at hard labor in a military prison.

A general court-martial at The Presidio passed the stiff sentence against Richard D. Williams, 22, who was convicted of refusing to obey the orders of an officer and board a Vietnam-bound flight on July 1.

The tall, husky defendant claimed that under U.S. treaties with his tribe, he was neither a citizen nor a resident alien "within the meaning of the Universal Military Training and Service Act."

A U.S. District Court held on June 30, however, that Indians are U.S. citizens and subject to the draft law.

His case will be reviewed by the commanding general, sixth army and the military Court of Appeal.

Injuries Minor From Collision

A Sausalito man suffered minor injuries Thursday in a three-car pileup on Highway 101, north of the Alto Wye.

California Highway Patrol reported that at 4:25 p.m., cars driven by John Kolesar, 57, of 195 Pine Drive, Fairfax, and Ivan Osby Cawood 51, of 9 Gordon Street, Sausalito, stopped in heavy commute traffic.

A car driven by Alan Peter Reyna, 27, of San Francisco, struck the rear of Cawood's car, pushing it ahead into Kolesar's vehicle, the patrol siad.

Cawood refused hospitalization.

Jewelry Theft

Mrs. Betty V. Danna of 3 Miraflores Avenue, San Rafael, told police Thursday that someone who "knew what he was looking for," stole $355 in jewlery from her dresser while she was not at home Wednesday night.

Sausalito Arts Festival Draws 100 Applicants

More than 100 professional artists have submitted art entries which have been accepted for the Sausalito Arts Festival to be held Sept. 2-4, Mrs. Joan Pera, executive committee member of the sponsoring Sausalito Arts Association, said today.

Screening was to be done today at 1 p.m. by association members of works of non-invited artists. The professional artists were all invited.

Artists will judge the works on opening day. Each participating artist has five votes and he is to vote for artists — not works. Artists who receive the most votes are eligible for eight money prizes totaling $2,000 — three $500 and five $100 prizes — and seven certificates of merit.

Anti-War Speaker Sets Two Speeches

Mark Dowie of Sausalito, an economic research with a San Francisco financial firm, will be speaker at two meetings in Marin County sponsored by Vietnam Summer, a project advocating an end of the war in Vietnam.

Dealing with "Taxes, Government Spending, and the War," the meetings will be held at the Novato Community House at Sherman and Delong avenues, Monday and at Marin County Civic Center on Aug. 28. Both meetings are scheduled for 8 p.m.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Hallucinatory Sensations Come With Migraine And Epilepsy

VAN DELLEN

Alice in Wonderland had fantastic dreams; at times she was remarkably tall and again, extremely small. Some of her subjective impressions were more subtle, as when she fancied herself two persons and was puzzled about her true identity.

At the risk of robbing Lewis Carroll of some of his reputation for power of imagination, sensations of this nature are not uncommon in epilepsy or migraine.

They may occur before or during an attack. In some, these sensations replace the bout entirely.

BUT THE individual need not have epilepsy or migraine; if either of these diseases is in the family, he may experience an epileptic or a migraine equivalent.

Instead of developing a convulsion, blackout, or headache, the victim feels he is changing in size or floating like a feather through space. Objects in sight may come closer or recede and the sense of time may also be affected.

Carroll was afflicted with migraine and Alice's experiences may reflect his own. People who develop illusions like this are said to be suffering from the Alice in Wonderland syndrome.

ANALOGOUS SYMPTOMS are the hallucinations associated with insanity or those induced by the use of drugs such as morphine, LSD, or alcohol.

The syndrome was described by Dr. J. Todd many years ago. One patient, a 24-year-old housewife, said, that periodically, "the ground comes up and I go down or vice versa, so that sometimes I feel myself to be six inches tall and sometimes 12 feet."

HER FEET often felt as though they were a yard long and when she was walking on the level she had the sensation of going up or downhill. Sometimes her head was divided into two, with one slightly behind and to the right of the other. The electroencephalogram showed an abnormal pattern.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

GOURMAND

A. C. writes: I always have had an enormous appetite and consume enough at dinner to satisfy four or five people. Strangely enough, I still feel hungry an hour later. I am 5 feet, 7 inches tall, and weigh 150. Should this worry me or do I have a healthy appetite?

REPLY

There is no need for concern if your metabolism is not high and if you are not feeding a tapeworm.

CANCER

L. O. writes: Are bronchial cancer and lung cancer the same?

REPLY

Not in the strict sense but most of the lung cancers described in newspapers and magazines are bronchogenic in origin, which means they originate in the walls of the bronchi.

ASPIRIN REBOUND

R. K. writes: When I take an aspirin for headache I feel as if I had a rock in my stomach next day. Please explain.

REPLY

In your case the remedy is worse than the disease. Why not try some other medication for your headache or use aspirin in combination with an alkalizing substance?

VINEGAR IN DIETING

Mrs. L. J. writes: Will sipping vinegar help a woman to reduce?

REPLY

This is doing it the hard way. Weight is lost when an individual eats less. Drinking vinegar helps if it decreases appetite or is used instead of food, which we do not advise.

Today's Health Hint — Have the brakes inspected regularly.

Fishing Boat Rescue Is Made

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The Coast Guard cutter Point Winflow rescued a fisherman adrift in his 40-foot fishing vessel today after rescue helicopters were turned back by heavy fog.

John Sears of Orinda was picked up uninjured 35 miles from the Golden Gate Bridge. His boat, which began taking on water when its engines failed, was towed back to port.

Sinatra Kidnap Suspect Freed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A second man convicted of kidnaping Frank Sinatra Jr. has been released pending a new trial.

Joseph C. Amsler, 26, who spent three years and nine months in federal prison, was released Thursday to the custody of his lawyer.

U.S. District Judge Warren J. Ferguson said Amsler, sentence to 25 years, had been a model prisoner and had "acquired a conscience."

Last week John W. Irwin, 45, a co-defendant, was released on $50,000 bond.

Amsler and Irwin have been granted retrials by the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals for what the court says were irregularities in the indictment and trial procedures.

ALMANAC

The moon is full. The morning star is Saturn. The evening star is Mars.

Born on this day in 1870 was elder statesman Bernard Baruch and in 1821 aviation pioneer Orville Wright.

On this day in history:

In 1915, two Americans were killed when a German U-boat torpedoed the British liner "Arabic" in the Atlantic.

In 1955, the worst flood in northeastern U.S. history killed 200 persons and destroyed or damaged 20,000 homes.

In 1963, James Meredith became the first Negro to graduate from the University of Mississippi.

In 1966, a 44-day airline strike ended at a cost of $1.5 billion.

A thought for the day — Elder American statesman Bernard Baruch once said: "America has never forgotten . . . and will never forget . . . the nobler things that brought her into being and that light her path."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE
By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Opponents' Bid Can Sometimes Produce Valuable Information

The opponents don't bid for your benefit, but sometimes they can't help giving you vital information.

If you prefer not to use the information, they will praise your noble character, but they will still pick up the marbles.

DOWN ONE

South took the ace of hearts, ruffed his low heart in dummy and led the king of spades, relying on the normal 3-2 break to limit his trump loss to two tricks.

The trumps broke badly, and South eventually lost three trumps and a club. Down one.

DESERVES IT

Declarer deserved his hard luck because he failed to take East's bid into account. East and West were using weak jump overcalls, so that East could be relied upon to show up with a six-card heart suit but very little outside strength.

If East had the ace of spades he would have no side kings, for with an ace and a king outside of a good heart suit East would bid just one heart rather than two hearts.

LEADS TRUMP

Armed with this information, South should lead a low spade at the second trick. If dummy's king loses to East's ace, South can later win finesses in both diamonds and clubs.

When the king of spades actually wins the second trick, declarer cashes the ace of diamonds, ruffs a diamond, and then ruffs his low heart in dummy.

TRUMP LEAD

Declarer ruffs another diamond, and the king falls. Now South leads a trump, since he can afford to lose three trump tricks.

When West returns a club South wins in dummy with the ace of clubs, discards a club on the queen of diamonds while West follows suit and then discards his last club on dummy's last diamond. West gets three spades, but nothing else.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid four hearts.

With nine points in high cards and excellent distribution, you know that you want the final contract to be four hearts and nothing else. Jump right to it in order to avoid any kind of misunderstanding.

Infant Baptism Move In Baptist Branch

By UP International

Are Southern Baptist churches moving toward infant baptism?

The very suggestion will horrify many staunch Baptists. One of the cardinal tenets of the Baptist movement ever since the Reformation has been an insistence on "believer's baptism" — which means that no one should be baptized until he is old enough to make a responsible personal decision for Christ.

But figures compiled by a state Baptist newspaper, the Illinois Baptist, 9ndicate that some churches at least are taking a very liberal view of the minimum age that can be assumed to represent responsible maturity.

Of the 360,000 persons baptized in Southern Baptist churches last year, 1,146 were age five or younger; 34,026 were between six and eight; and 139,211 were between nine and twelve years old.

ANNIVERSARY — Rev. Francis W. Read, vicar of St. Columba's Episcopal Church of Inverness, will celebrate a festival eucharist at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow in observance of his 29th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Father Read, a former attorney, has ministered in the Diocese of California for the past 20 years, serving at San Luis Obispo and Seaside before coming to St. Columba's in 1960.

Baptist Schools Stock Libraries With Federal Help

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The libraries of 38 Baptist schools are being strengthened through the purchase of books and other educational materials made possible by federal grants, the U.S. Office of Education reports.

Sixteen of the 38 Baptist schools are American Baptist, 15 are Southern Baptist and one school is related to both the Southern and American Baptist Conventions.

In addition, there is one each General Baptist, Baptist General Conference, Free Will and Seventh Day Baptist institutions. The remaining two are independent Baptist schools affiliated with groups of local churches.

All but one of the Baptist colleges received the basic grant of $5,000, awarded on a dollar-for-dollar matching fund basis. In addition, most of the school received supplemental funds for $10 for each full-time student.

Bible School Will Open On Monday

Classes for students, age 3 through 12, will include worship service, Bible study, handiwork, music and character studies. The school will continue through Aug. 30.

Principal will be Joice Harrop, daughter of Dr. Clayton Harrop, professor at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary at Strawberry.

In another church activity, a special "Christmas in August" theme will be used for a special worship service tomorrow night. A missionary from the Baptist Goodwill Center in Oakland will be the speaker.

Protestants Lead Convert Seekers

NEW YORK (UPI) — The average Protestant is more likely to try to convert others to his faith than the Catholic or Jew, according to a Gallup poll sponsored by the Catholic Digest.

Asked whether they ever tried to get anyone to join their religious group, 45 per cent of the Protestants queried said they did not, while the negative response from Catholics was 75 per cent and among Jews, 81 per cent.

Sermon Topic

Dr. Fred I. Drexler of Mill Valley will be the guest preacher tomorrow at the Mill Valley First Baptist Church. His topic will be "Doubting Thomas Who Refused to Believe."

CONFERENCE CENTER — Marin college-age students will join others throughout the world for a three-day biennial conference opening Thursday in Boston at headquarters of the Christian Science Church.

Luther League Names New Officer Slate

SEATTLE, Wash (UPI) — Peter Lieurance, 19, Port Angeles, Wash., has been elected president of the Luther League of the American Lutheran Church, officials of the organization announced today.

Lieurance will succeed David Horstmann, Moorhead, Minn., as president.

The voting was conducted this week in Seattle and Dallas, Tex., the two sites of the 1967 triennial convention of the organization.

Among the 15,087 registrants in the two convention sections, about 1,200 were voting delegates.

Gerry Glaser, 21, Minneapolis, was named first vice president, and Steve Dale, 20, Thief River Falls, Minn., second vice president. Jane Fruehling, 18, Waverly, Iowa, was elected secretary.

Elected to the league's general board were John Corgan, 19, Staten Island, N. Y.; Jerry Pyle, 17, Castleton, N. D.; Ruth Onkka, 17, Valders, Wis.; Paul Brown, 17, Seattle; and Vicki Arndt, 17, Jamestown, N. D.

Lutherans Reaffirm The Sin Of Adam

NEW YORK (AP)—God "created all things in six days." Adam and Eve "were real, historical human beings." Sin "had its origin in one man, Adam."

These beliefs were stoutly reaffirmed by the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod today as its eight-day biennial governing convention neared its close.

Marinites To Attend Conference In Boston

At least 12 Marin college age students will attend a three-day student conference, beginning Thursday, at the Christian Science Church headquarters in Boston.

In all more than 5,000 students are expected to attend which in previous sessions have drawn representatives from 887 colleges and universities in 36 nations.

Scheduled to leave this weekend with a group from Berkeley by chartered bus are James Danse, Geraldine Lawrence, Allen Smith, Christina Smith, David Smith, Robert Smith and Denise Wallman, all of San Rafael; Joy Wurtz of Kentfield, Allen Hadley of San Anselmo, and Kathleen Benoit, Sleepy Hollow.

One of the major objectives of the conference will be to explore the relevance of Christian insight as a radical healing force in the range of human experience.

The conference will be keynoted by an address by Erwin D. Canham, editor of The Christian Science Monitor.

IN PULPIT — Rev. Aaron John Ungersma, professor of pastoral psychology at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will be the guest minister beginning tomorrow at the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael through Sept. 20. Services are at 9:15 and 11 a.m.

FOR COMMUNICATION

Theologians Are Returning To Church's Early Language

By LOUIS CASSELS
(U.P. International)

In their effort to communicate with modern man, Christian theologians are returning to the language of the early church.

They're talking more and more about the holy spirit.

And they are discovering that contemporary minds are quite receptive to the original Biblical concept of the holy spirit as God-in-action in the everyday world.

The Apostle Paul and other authors of the new testament had a great deal to say about the holy spirit. But they were concerned primarily with the spirit's activity. It was so real to them that they felt no need of definitions and explanations.

It wasn't until the third and fourth centuries A.D. that church fathers began to embalm the experience of the Christian community in creedal definitions drawn from the terminology of Greek metaphysics. That was the ear in which third person of the Trinity"—a concept that has baffled countless generations of catechism classes.

Today theology is breaking out of the prison of Greek thought-forms. It also is reacting against the mania for definition which obsessed the church for so many centuries. It is returning to the attitude of the earliest Christians who were willing to live with mystery, and who knew that experiencing God's presence is infinitely more important than trying to explain it in a neat verbal formula.

Thus it is possible for contemporary theology to speak of the holy spirit not in confusing trinitarian language but simply as God-here-and-now, God at work in the world, God dwelling within the hearts and minds of men.

This is a congenial approach to a pragmatic generation that thinks in terms of results. And it opens up a whole treasury of Biblical language for use in answering the religious questions that are actually being asked by young people and adults today.

One of those questions is: How can I know what to believe —about the meaning of life, my relation to the ultimate, about right and wrong?

The Bible's answer is that the holy spirit "will lead you into all truth" if given a chance. The spirit's guidance is freely available to all who seek it. It is given not through "voices" or "visions" or other external manifestations, but quietly and naturally from the innermost depths of man's own being.

The spirit's guidance may be experienced subjectively as "conscience" or as "intuition." In the former aspect, it undergirds man's moral sense. In the latter, it is the wellspring of man's faith that life does have meaning and purpose.

Television Still Has Minor Religion Role

By U. P INTERNATIONAL

Religious leaders for years have nourished the hope that television might make it possible to communicate the message of faith of millions of people who never set foot in a church or synagogue.

The hope has not been fulfilled. Television plays only a minor role in religious communication.

There seem to be two reasons why this is true:

First, religious programs usually carried free as a "public service" are relegated by most TV stations to off-hours, such as early Sunday morning. It would be next to impossible for even a first-rate program to build a sizable audience at such a time.

But — and this is the second reason — religious programs are rarely first-rate. Most of them are produced on shoestring budgets, and they come out amateurish and dull. Some are so heavy-footed in their preachments they make even TV commercials sound subtle.

Next month, television stations throughout the country will begin showing in prime viewing time a new series of religious programs sponsored by the Episcopal Church's "Parish of the Air" which has its headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

The series, produced on film by a professional studio, stars Hollywood actor Ralph Bellamy as host. It takes a documentary approach to such subjects as sex, marriage, family life, job pressures, the problems of growing old, and the youth rebellion. Although it deals with serious matters in an adult way, it is meant to have enough entertainment value to compete with regular TV offerings.

The films, for showing on a monthly schedule, will be syndicated only to stations which are willing to show them during prime time, when audiences are largest. Caroline Rakestraw, executive director of the Parish of the Air, told UPI that response from stations "has so far been good."

The first 12 films in the series were produced at a cost of $500,000 — a huge sum compared to the outlay for most religious programs. Mrs. Rakestraw said the money was "painfully raised" over a period of five years, in the form of individual contributions from some 4,000 Episcopalians who are subscribers to the Parish of the Air.

"We felt it wouldn't be worthwhile doing anything until we had enough money to give the series the kind of dramatics and entertainment that people expect when they turn on their TV sets," she said.

"We didn't want dressed-up preachments. You can't hold a TV audience that way. Instead, we will try to help viewers gain a better understanding of themselves, in the hope that they will come a step closer to the discovery that 'Under God, there IS an alternative to the way I live my life.'"

Hawken Has His Second Norcal Junior Golf Title

He ought to be. The 17-year-old San Rafael High School graduate won his second Northern California Junior Golf title in the past three years yesterday when he nicked 16-year-old Bob Lapic of Burlingame, two and one, in the finals at Lake Merced Country Club.

Hawken thus became the first double winner in 24 years, going back to 1943 when Eddy Fry won his second straight. Hawken, who won in 1965, continued Marin County's stranglehold on the title. Ray Leach of Novato won last year.

It was a long, ungraceful struggle against Lapic, who had knocked out Leach in the quarterfinals.

Hawken finally won it on the 35th hole when Lapic three-putted to end it all.

Prior to that final hole, Hawken had trailed through most of the afternoon round, mostly because of a shaky putter. Lapic was not tearing things up either, finding himself plagued with the same problem that helped trip up Leach — too much time in the trees.

Hawken trailed in the afternoon despite an early two-up lead in the morning. But Lapic caught up and went ahead early in the afternoon, as both boys played at the links version of paring the national deficit.

Two big shots came on the 11th hole where Lapic dunked in a 63-foot putt for a birdie and Hawken came back with a 25-footer for his bird.

It was a grueling pace for Hawken who had played 36 holes four days in a row.

Hawken, incidentally, had led all golfers in the qualifying tournament.

Hawken, who got off to a slow start during the regular high school season, has been in top form this summer. Watch for him in the national.

Meanwhile, more than halfway across the United States, another San Rafael golfer was sparkling too.

Ron Cerrudo, runner-up in the British Amateur, took the second round lead in the Eastern Amateur by firing a 69 over the Elizabeth Manor Golf Course in Portsmouth, Va.

Cerrudo had a 136 total for a one-stroke lead

American League Making Comeback

About a dozen years ago in Tucson where the Cleveland Indians were training, two of the registered brains of baseball, Bill Veeck, who bills himself now as "the commissioner of hustle," and Hank Greenberg, the commissioner of worry, were bemoaning the sad style of American League baseball and wondering what to do about it. Suggestions ranged from plans for speeding up the game by motoring relief pitchers to the mound, to inter-league baseball the following year.

"WHY," WONDERED a wandering newsman, "wouldn't you just beat out the Yankees for a year or two?"

The suggestion startled the commissioner of hustle and made the commissioner of worry start on his second set of fingernails. They thought it was a terrible idea.

"WHY," THE shocked Veeck said, "we draw 80 per cent of our gate from the Yankee trips."

"Exactly," said the newsman. "Does that tell you something?"

It Wasn't League, It Was A Laugh

The plain truth was the junior circuit was not a league, it was a laugh. It was not a pennant race, it was a parade.

THE FIRST YEAR the league locked the Yankees in a closet didn't help much. The Yankees had loaned out the title before, once every 10 or 15 years or so, only to claim it back for the next 10.

The Minnesota Twins won, but nobody took them seriously. Their infield couldn't cash a check south of Sioux Falls either. "Which one's Mays?" people still asked at the All-Star games.

LAST YEAR, WHEN Baltimore came up with what was, by all odds, the best non-Yankee team to win the American League pennant since the 1934-35 Detroit Tigers, it began to occur to people the monarch's pallor was not just indigestion, but rigor mortis. "The Yanks is dead," Charlie Dressen might have said. People began to pay attention to that funny league on the other side of the Hudson River.

Other Teams Regained Courage

Better yet, the other teams began to poke their heads up out of the air-raid shelter, as if the all-clear had sounded, and the buses were running again. Nobody was afraid of the Baltimore Orioles or the Minnesota Twins. Hadn't they been cowering in the dark along with everyone else all those years?

AS SOON AS the players were convinced the body in the coffin really was the New York Yankees, the whole league began to swagger. They began conking each other over the heads with unaccustomed skill and enthusiasm.

The American League today is the glamor league. The Boston Red Sox, in a ballpark so small you couldn't hold a decent love-in, have drawn a million customers already. Only the other day, a colleague wondered querulously (but seriously) where everybody was when "only" 80,000 showed up at Anaheim Stadium for a three-game Angel set with Minnesota.

IN MINNESOTA, people drive 500 miles one-way for a Saturday afternoon game. The league is so frisky it has stomped the world's champions down into the second division. The Washington Senators have ceased acting like the body of men from whom they derive their nickname and they get things done.

Owners Feared Empty Cashbox

The nervous owners who clustered about the cash box the first year in the Yankee eclipse, and prayed that CBS would come up with a new Mickey Mantle in a hurry, were like prisoners who feared to rejoin society. Only, now, they fill their reserve seats with five teams instead of just one.

Will the Yankees stay down, and the rest of the league up? Probably. The Yankees no longer have the penurious St. Louis Browns, the penny-pinching old managements like the old Washington Senators and Chicago White Sox to deal with on the slave market. Money doesn't talk any more. It barely whispers.

THE WORLD SERIES will be in a place where Ed Sullivan has to have the star on by remote. Joe Cronin can walk down the street and say, "I'm the president of the American League," without having someone say "The American League of what?" His salary can come out of petty cash, the way it's going. And a newsman can send a belated wire to the commissioner of hustle saying, "See?"

They're Off To Alaska

A wet cloud of uncertainty is settling over the Babe Ruth World Series now scheduled to be held in Anchorage, Alaska, after a disaster-size flood washed the tournament out of Fairbanks.

Right in the middle of the whole thing are Novato's Babe Ruth all-stars, and a group of parents.

The team and coaches have already arrived safely in Anchorage and are settled in foster homes for the duration of the series. The parents, a group of 17 all told, left this morning from San Francisco International Airport.

But what they will find there is anybody's guess. The storm that turned Fairbanks into a disaster area is reportedly moving towards Anchorage, although it has been broken up and is left somewhat scattered.

It has already been raining in Anchorage, leaving the Series playing field wet.

Refugees have crowded into Anchorage, leaving accommodations without reservations at a premium.

The Marin spectators are scheduled to stay in Anchorage until Aug. 28. They have already confirmed accommodations in crowded Anchorage.

Making the trip to Anchorage are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gnoss, Mr. and Mrs. George Gnoss, Mr. and Mrs. Irv Links, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Burnam, Grace and Craig Dillon, Leonard Zechlin and son Ron, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Federick, Mrs. Bob and Susan Sisemore and Craig Keener.

As of this date, the Novato Babe Ruths are scheduled to meet Klamath Falls, Ore., Tuesday.

Youngsters To Compete In AAU Junior Olympics

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Five hundred of America's leading young performers in swimming and track and field will compete here Tuesday in the first National AAU Junior Olympics Championships.

The competitors, winners of 21 nationwide regional meets plus a delegation from the host District of Columbia AAU Association, are boys and girls in the 13 through 17 age groups.

(San Rafael Swim Club members Cookie Arrighi and Tami McDuffie are in the group of top young swimmers.)

Among the top swimmers who will participate in the one-day event are Steve Krause of Seattle, Wash., former world record holder in the 1,500-meter freestyle, Libby Tullis of Pompano Beach, Fla., Patrick O'Connor of Indianapolis, Ind., Duncan Scott of Mesa, Ariz. and Brian Job of Lakewood, Ohio.

Heading the track contingent will be hurdler Debbie Lansky of Taylor, Mich., Walter Gibbs of Kansas City, Mo. and Curt LeRossignol of Livingston, Mont., high jumpers, and Theodis McGee of Philadelphia in the sprints.

Vice-president Hubert Humphrey will welcome the athletes at the opening ceremonies Monday night. Bob Mathias, a California congressman and the Olympic decathlon titleholder in 1948 and 1952, will serve as an official during the track and field events.

Indian Valley Nine Wins Tourney Game

An explosive three-run third inning carried Indian Valley to a 3-2 verdict over San Jose in the losers' bracket of the first Joe DiMaggio League Baseball Tournament at Albert Field last night.

Indian Valley scored its runs on a two-run single by Rich Denning and a run-producing single by Gary Welch. Don Mantooth hurled a five-hitter for the winners.

Indian Valley was to have met Daly City, a 5-0 loser to San Francisco Flying Goose last night, in a 1 p.m. game today. Daly City topped Indian Valley, 6-3 in the tourney opener.

The championship game is set for 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, with a second game if necessary at 3 in the double elimination tourney. Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee Clipper, will be on hand to award trophies.

Novato Gal Wins Water Ski Jump Title

Mrs. Jim (Thelma) Salmas of Novato won the senior women's jumping title with a 76-foot effort in the National Water Ski Championships at Towns Lake, Austin, Tex., yesterday.

Mike Suyderhoud of San Anselmo finished third in the boys slalom and is still very much in the running for the all-events title with the jumping and tricks competition still to come.

L.A. Lakers Cut Top Draft Pick

Mahaffey was placed on waivers Thursday. He is expected to enter medical school at the University of Georgia.

Mahaffey averaged 12.1 points in 10 intrasquad games for the National Basketball Association club.

Jaycees Baseball Team Wins Recreation Title

The Jaycees Senior Baseball team nicked Conti, 1-0, to capture the San Rafael Recreation Department Senior Youth Baseball title at Albert Field Thursday night.

The winning run came home on a passed ball in the fifth inning. Danny Meredith hurled a five-hitter for the winners while Dirk Gansloser was a tough loser with a two-hitter.

San Rafael Swimmers Set Record

Those San Rafael girl swimmers did it again.

The San Rafael Swim Club's renowned girls 11-12 200-meter freestyle relay team shared the national spotlight with a boys 11-12 200-meter freestyle relay team from Santa Clara at the sizzling Far Western AAU Age-Group Swimming Championships at Foothill College yesterday.

Cookie Arrighi, Katie Parnow, Lucy Suttles and Jo Hislop who have torn up a batch of national records this year, cracked another one yesterday when they clicked for a time of 2:02.2 for a new record.

It was part of a record-breaking meet that saw two national records fall, another one tied and five Pacific Association records tumble.

U.S. Track Stars Without Baggage

VIAREGGIO, Italy (AP) — The touring United States track and field team arrived from Germany for a triangular meet against Italy and Spain tonight and tomorrow, but their baggage and equipment went to Rome by mistake. Airline officials said the misguided equipment would arrive in time for the first event.

Daily Double Pays $828 At Del Mar

DEL MAR, (AP) — A pair of longshots provided an $828 daily double payoff at the Del Mar Turf Club, and Canal Street capped the day with a narrow victory in the $4,500 feature.

Strange Things Happen At Foggy Candlestick Park

With billows of fog cascading onto the diamond, the San Francisco Giants opened a 15-game home stand with a 3-1 victory over Cincinnati that inched them to within one-half game of second - place. Atlanta's Braves and Cincinnati lead them in the scramble for runner - up spot behind rampaging St. Louis.

Torrid-hitting Alou figured in all three Giant runs, driving in the first with a ground out, scoring the second after singling and driving in an insurance tally in the eighth inning with his fourth single of the game.

HIKES AVERAGE

The spree hiked the right fielder's average from .304 to .311, but Alou was almost apologetic after the game because he "didn't get good wood on any of the hits."

San Francisco snapped loser Milt Pappas' scoreless inning string at 19 with a run in the second. Bob Etheridge, Hal Lanier and Sadecki all singled to load the bases and Alou, after a bunt attempt went awry, grounded to shortstop, scoring Etheridge.

Pappas, now 12-8, singled to open the third and advanced to second on Tommy Harper's walk. Catcher Tom Haller's throw to Lanier picked off Pappas, so the speedy Harper took matters into his own hands. The speedy Berkeley resident stole second and third and scored on Pete Rose's squeeze bunt.

10 STRAIGHT

Sadecki, 5 - 4, retired 10 straight Reds after Rose's hit, and the Giants scored the go-ahead run in the fifth on successive singles by Alou, Jim Davenport and Willie Mays. Etheridge was struck by a Ted Abernathy pitch in the eighth, was sacrificed to second by Lanier and scored on Alou's two - out single.

"It's hard for anyone to bat against Abernathy's under-hand delivery," explained Alou. "And Pappas is one of the pitchers I hate to bat against. He was real tough tonight. I tried to bunt in the second inning because I didn't think I could hit him."

Sadecki, who lost a five-hitter to the Cardinals, 2-1, Sunday, scattered six hits and was given strong fielding support, especially by Lanier at shortstop. The slick - fielding infielder made a leaping grab of two liners and also started a double play in the seventh inning.

Dave Hill Fires Blazing 61 In Hartford Open

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The slim man in the shocking orange slacks spent over an hour on practice shots after playing in the second round of the $100,000 Greater Hartford Open — not because Dave Hill had any faults to correct — but to keep the form which gave him a 10-under-par 61 yesterday.

"I practice every day of my life," the 30-year-old Hill said as he whacked eight-irons landing a few feet in front of his caddy "It's a humiliating game, 61 one day, 72 the next, but I'm glad it's vice versa this week."

Hill's 61 added to Thursday's 72 gave him a 133 total and a one-stroke edge over South African Gary Player and Texan Terry Dill. Player had 65-69, and Dill 66-68 for 134 totals. Veteran Doug Ford had 67 yesterday to fall next at 135.

PRACTICE

"This practice is to maintain what I have," Hill said, "but yesterday I was out here working on how to get under the ball better. I'd been hitting shots too low and they bounced away from the pin."

Winner of the Memphis Open in May when he led from start to finish, Hill had 10 birdies and eight pars on his Wethersfield Country Club card yesterday.

Only two of his birdie putts, rolling in from 35 and 18 feet, were of the "hit it and hope" variety. He made five birdies on putts of less than five feet, the rest from about 10 feet, attesting to complete success of his Thursday practice session with the irons.

"I'd have liked to have made that eight-foot putt on the last hole," Hill said, "I've never had a 29." The miss gave him a 30 on the back side, six-under-par. The Professional Golfers Association 18-hole competitive record is 60, set by several players. The 61 did tie the low round of 1967 which had been scored earlier by Gay Brewer during the Pensacola Open.

HUNG IN

Player said he just hung in there waiting for his putts to drop. He waited until the 17th hole before one did, a 35-footer, and he added a nine-footer for a birdie on the 18th for his 69.

On a short golf course where a hot putter could work wonders, there were dozens of golfers waiting impatiently for their turn with the magic wand. Among them is Frank Beard at 68-69—137, who has scored three tournament victories in 1967 while winning $94,877.

Lee Trevino, 27-year-old El Paso, Tex., club professional in his first serious try at the pro tour, stood just three strokes off Hill's pace with 67-69—136.

In the group with Beard at 137 were former PGA champion Dave Marr, former British Open winner Kel Nagle, Dan Sikes, Steve Opermann and Dudley Wysong. Sikes had the second-best score on the course yesterday, a 65.

Second Marriage For Clay

CHICAGO (AP) — Cassius Clay was married in a quiet ceremony last night, entertained a few friends and relatives at a reception, then took his 17-year-old bride on a surprise, friendly visit to neighbors.

The 25-year-old prize fighter, recently stripped of his heavyweight title, and Belinda Boyd were wed in Clay's South Side home in a Black Muslim ceremony.

Originally scheduled for tomorrow, the wedding was quickly arranged yesterday and was closed to the press.

The deposed champion, who prefers his Black Muslim name of Muhammad Ali, said he had been romantically interested in his new wife for more than a year. The bride is the oldest of four children of Raymond Boyd, of suburban Blue Island, himself a Muslim.

The wedding was attended by the bride's parents, but Clay's mother and father flew in from Louisville, Ky., too late to witness the ceremony.

Miss Boyd wore the simple, floor-length white dress and veil used by female Muslims, while the boxer was attired in a black tuxedo jacket.

"It was a very small wedding," Clay said after the ceremony.

Clay was indefinite about honeymoon plans, implying that he planned to stay in Chicago for at least a day or two. However, a member of his training camp, Gene Mason, said that Clay and his bride would be on their way to Hawaii today.

Despite the efforts to keep the wedding as quiet as possible, Clay spoke briefly to an Associated Press reporter when the groom came out of his home to say good-bye to some departing friends.

"Are you the champ?" the reporter asked. "Yes, I am," Clay softly replied. "Are you married?" "Yes, I am," he repeated. "Congradulations."

"Thank you," the boxer replied as he went to shake hands. "You sort of snuck up on me."

It was the second marriage for Clay who was divorced from Sonji M. Roi, 27, a former model, last year. Clay said that the marriage was dissolved because his first wife would not become a member of the Muslims and live up to the sect's religious code.

"Will Rogers said he never met a man he didn't like. Well, it's obvious he never met some of the Oakland Raiders football fans that I know."

Clippers Vs. Generals

The Oakland Clippers, having clinched the Western Division title of the National Professional Soccer League, will play their reserves for a good part of their final home game of the regular season tomorrow against the New York Generals.

The Generals have a 2-1 edge over the Clippers, who were shut out twice in New York and barely won 1-0 over the Generals in the Coliseum in April.

Game time tomorrow is 2 p.m.

49ers, Cowboys To Vie Tomorrow

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bay area fans may get a good look tomorrow at former California quarterback Craig Morton when the Eastern Division champion Dallas Cowboys play the San Francisco 49ers in a National Football League exhibition game beginning at 1 o'clock. o'clock.

Morton will be back in Kezar Stadium where on Jan. 2, 1965, his 5 - yard touchdown pass to Jack Schraub in the final seconds gave the West an 11-7 victory over the East in the annual Shrine charity game.

Coach Tom Landry of Dallas plans to start veterans, but said today Morton would be his first replacement for QB Don Meredith.

Morton was graduated from Cal in 1965 after setting these three - year school records: most passes, 641; completed, 355; total yards, 4,501. His completion average, not a record, is 55.3 per cent.

He also had the most yards passing in one game, 288, and most total offense, 285.

Morton didn't fare too well against the Rams in Los Angeles last weekend, going in for the final quarter with reserves and rookies. Landry said he wants a better look at Morton.

He also expressed determination to win this game, and so did the Cowboys, who were extremely downcast after their 6-20 loss to Los Angeles.

How long Landry lets his veterans play against the 49ers may be determined partially by the score. He doesn't want the Cowboys to get a losing complex.

Christiansen also will start veteran — 9 of the 11 who began last Sunday's 42-14 wild triumph over Cleveland.

Californians Set National Swim Marks In AAU Meet

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Blonde Debbie Meyer and Tall Claudia Kolb, both Californians, had world swimming records to their credit today and pert Miss Meyer had her sights trained on still another history-making performance in the National AAU Women's Swimming and Diving championships.

Debbie won the 400-meter free style yesterday in 4:29.0, a feat comparable to Roger Bannister's cracking the four minute mile, in an event where 4:30 represents the supposed ultimate. It lowered the existing record from the

Top Scientists Refute The Prophets Of Doom

EVERY ERA HAS its prophets of doom.

We have no shortage today.

We hear it said that radiation poisoning, air pollution, water pollution, and unmanageable accumulations of refuse are among the problems that will overwhelm mankind even during the lifespans of many now living.

If you are tired of such pessimistic forecasting, just listen to Glenn Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Dr. Seaborg foresees "a highly automated nuclear-powered industrial complex that would desalt water, process natural resources, recycle old (nuclear) materials, and turn out new products while also supplying electricity to distant cities and transportation systems."

"Such complexes, many parts of which might even be underground, may someday allow us to live in a junkless, unpolluted world," he concludes.

Radiation poisoning? Air pollution?

"The nuclear energy plant, far from polluting the atmosphere, is the cleanest kind of plant," says Alvin M. Weinberg, director of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

Water pollution?

"It is no longer science fiction to speak seriously of achieving water from the sea, by dual-purpose nuclear plants at prices that are acceptable," Dr. Weinberg declares.

Unmanageable accumulations of garbage and trash? Accumulations of nuclear waste materials?

The intense heat generated by nuclear plants can be utilized for massive incineration of garbage and trash.

"We are now solving the (nuclear) waste disposal problem and we are developing better methods of solving it," says Dr. Weinberg.

AS DR. SEABORG has observed, "We cannot return to a primitive state to retain our planet unspoiled and unsullied.

"It is possible for civilized man to coexist with nature.

"It is not an 'either or' situation.

It is reassuring to have men like Seaborg and Weinberg, who are unquestionably the best informed men in the country on this subject, refute the prophets of doom.

H. G. WELLS IS NOT remembered as a writer of science fiction but more than half a centruy ago he wrote "The World Set Free,"

There is no evidence that it made much of a splash in its day (prior to World War I) either as literature or among scientists.

But it did predict a new world order based on an inexhaustible source of inexpensive energy.

Study the book, as Dr. Weinberg has done, and you will be amazed at how accurately it predicted today's and tomorrow's development and utilization of nuclear energy.

BLIND OPPOSITION TO proposals for nuclear energy plants turns out to be opposition to human progress.

Dr. Seaborg puts it all in perspective this way:

"Modern science and technology must serve and not dominate man. In a democratic society this can happen only when all men try to understand something of the forces of science and technology, their environment, and common goals. With some understanding of these, some patience, plans can be made, rational decisions made and real progress can take place.

"Nuclear energy today is a force that lends itself to such progress. And the fullness of its enormous potential will not depend solely on the work of a few scientists, or the AEC, or the power industry, or the electric utilities.

"It may depend to a great extent on the understanding and cooperation of the power-consuming public."

Summer's Last Fling

For many people, August is the last gasp of summer vacation. For many Marinites, impending Labor Day looms like a death knell to fun, instead of celebrating this day which is set aside to honor America's laboring masses, too many of us are gloomy at the prospect of joining them.

In a way it is a pity. The Northern California coast counties don't really warm up until the rest of the country cools down. Some of our nicest weather is after Labor Day, when most of us are tied up in factories, offices and classrooms.

But if man restrains when Nature beckons, we can take some comfort in the fact that Marin has very few hot, hot days by east coast and mid-western standards.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUET to Mitchell L. Voydat, assistant superintendent of San Rafael schools, on his appointment to head the new bureau of elementary and secondary education in the State Education Department. Voydat had a rather unhappy four years in the San Rafael schools system. Given an unpleasant job to do, he found himself without much backing from the then-superintendent and board when he did it. We wish him well in his new assignment.

BRICKBATS to the board of trustees of Bolinas-Stinson and West Marin School Districts for refusing to give the voters a chance to decide whether the districts should be merged. The idea may be unsound; it may be unpopular — but that is for the citizens to say. The boards should not have closed the door.

BRICKBATS to bad-mannered drivers who barrel on through pedestrian cross-walks while pedestrians are waiting to cross — even mothers with children and persons carrying bags and bundles.

BRICKBAT to the person, whoever it was, who dumped a truckload of garbage at Agate Beach, one of Marin's more beautiful spots — until this happened.

BUSINESSMAN CITED FOR YOUTH WORK

It takes a carload of dedication and courage for a successful businessman to keep living in the slum area where he was born. One Chicagoan who did this to help the youth of the neighborhood received the Lane Bryant Award for individual volunteer work.

The man, Albert E. Johnson, a Negro, had been working as a janitor in the rundown Lawndale section and worked his way up to a public relations position in a utility cmpany.

Instead of moving away, Mr. Johnson stayed where he felt most needed. He spent his spare time talking with leaders of teen-age gangs, reaching many delinquents who had eluded teachers and social workers.

He and another award winner were cited as follows: "They found things that were imperfect and tried to do something about it with new patterns of action."

Things nearly everywhere are "imperfect." If God has given us certain advantages, He expects us to use them for other persons not so fortunate. To do this is to follow Christ.

(Isaiah 1:17)

Never let me forget, Lord, that the good things I have are on loan from You. Help me to put them to proper use.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Military Benefits Denied—For Beard

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Today my son, Gray, and I presented ourselves to the proper officials of Hamilton Air Force Base for the renewal of our dependents' identification cards.

Gray was denied a card under some obscure regulation or ruling of said base. It appears there is HAFBR-30-1, which although I did not see a copy of such, applies to the "personal appearance" of civilian applicants for I.D. cards. The military objected to the appearance of a civilian — he wears a beard. Otherwise, he appears as any other normal 17-year-old male civilian.

Lt. Ruttledge died believing that among other things he was fighting to insure the freedom of his wife and of his sons, and further believing that should he die he would have at least provided for them certain securities and benefits accruing to the widows and orphans of military men, one among them being hospital and medical assistance.

Today both the freedom and the securities and benefits he fought for have been stripped from us.

Gray, as a civilian, is not entitled to wear a beard? And Gray, as the orphan of a military man, is denied medical and hospital assistance at Hamilton Air Force Base?

Gray has not only lost a father whom he can scarcely remember — but is also to lose the benefits which that father sought to secure for his son? All of this through the capricious whim of the military mind.

I defend Gray's right to a beard, just as I defend all of our inherent freedoms — and I defend the right of every male, American citizen to wear a beard — even that of Gen. U. S. Grant.

Eyesore Perpetuated In Tiburon, Also

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I wish to commend you for your editorial account of the "eyesores" which Marin County cities have left — and even created — as a result of demolishing homes and apartments damaged by last winter's slides. However, I wish to call your attention to one notable omission. This is the Noel property on Reed Ranch Road in Tiburon which the city council ordered demolished at the expense of a lien placed against the owner.

While the house itself has been destroyed, the foundations, walls and other debris still cover the property. This not only gives it the appearance of the wreckage left by recent urban riots or by World War II bombing raids, but continues to present a hazard to the safety of children who have been observed playing in the ruins.

As your editorial concludes — "there seems to be something wrong in this picture" — for which it appears to me the Tiburon City Council must accept responsibility.

Tourism Depends On Saving Beauty

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The Marin Conservation League would like to congratulate you on your fine editorial of Aug. 5.

The studies that have been done for Marin County to determine its economic future have pointed out that one of the major industries should be tourism. This is a sound choice, as you state, for the county as its beauty is known and admired all over the world.

But it follows that if the beauty is to be preserved careful planning must be demanded and supported by its citizens.

We have now reached a decisive moment. The decision on density for West Marin may well determine what we can preserve of the beauty of the area — a beauty that will bring tourists to the great Point Reyes National Seashore and to the other lovely spots in Marin County.

Bolinas Petition Signers Thanked

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I would like to thank each and every signer of the annexation petition (for annexation of Bolinas-Stinson School District to West Marin School District), which was legal and also a vote of confidence for our two new trustees, Mrs. Jane Phillips and Edith Sarraille, who devoted much time and expense to give our children a better education in our district.

It is not the burden of taxpayers to pay for elaborate school buildings, but to pay for good school buildings, with a good teaching staff and furnishing plenty of materials to work with.

It is indeed heartbreaking to work for something so hard and be defeated by non-property owners and transients, who come to our district, not to stay but wreak havoc and then move out, leaving our community to pick up the pieces and start all over again. This has happened many times before.

Cold August Days For Johnson In The Summer Of Discontent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those were President Johnson's golden days, 1965. This summer of 1967 is hot but for him they are the cold days, getting colder. If he pays attention to public opinion, and he does, it's enough to make him shiver.

Starting out in 1965 he had it all his own way, thanks to the 1964 elections. In Congress his Democrats swamped the Republicans, with 295 to 140 seats in the House, and 67 to 33 seats in the Senate, a two-thirds edge.

No wonder then, with these majorities and his ceaseless prodding, the Democratic-run Congress produced the most remarkable legislative year in history. And he had time for prodding in those days. The Vietnam war was in babyhood.

He had just begun the U.S. military buildup in 1965, with only 165,000 Americans there by the end of the year. He was criticized for being involved in the war at all, but his standing with the voters was high.

IN THE FIRST six months of 1965, for example, when it was clear the troop buildup had begun in earnest, the Gallup poll showed public approval of the way he handled his job dropped from 71 to 64 per cent.

But by June public approval was back up to 70 percent. This couldn't last unless Congress was able to repeat its amazing performance in 1966 or unless the war somehow could be brought to a quick and victorious end. Neither happened.

Congress coasted in 1966 and there were no victories in Vietnam. The war became a nightmare. The troop build-up went on. There was more discontent at home.

This was reflected in the 1966 elections, giving back to the Republicans 48 House seats, three Senate seats. The Johnson breeze in Congress died away. He prodded less as he became more preoccupied by the war.

CONGRESS DAWDLED this year, just as it did in 1966. The war criticism piled up on Johnson. The doves were still complaining. But so were the hawks now. They wanted Johnson to make the war tougher.

He began talking of a war dragging on indefinitely. The American death toll in Vietnam went up from 1,365 at the end of 1965 to over 12,500 now. And already there is a bad odor from the upcoming elections in Vietnam.

They were supposed to have been a shining symbol of how the United States, which claimed it was fighting the war to assure the South Vietnamese of self-determination, was helping the people establish a democratic society.

ON TOP of the empty basket from Congress, the endless war, and Johnson's realization that he had to ask for a tax boost to pay for the war, he was drenched in the summer of 1967 with riots, the worst in history.

Few can doubt he wants to be re-elected in 1968 but the Gallup and Harris polls over the weekend must have chilled his blood. Both reported that now only 39 per cent of those quizzed approved the way he handles the presidency.

Perhaps a major reason for this sour public reaction is lack of forceful leadership. Johnson and the country, instead of giving a sense of movement, seem to be marking time.

ONE EXAMPLE: He was criticized for not sending U.S. troops fast enough into Detroit to crush the riot although it still is not clear whether he or Michigan's Gov. George Romney was responsible for the delay.

But Johnson was far from forceful when he went on television to explain—he did the explaining at midnight—why he sent the troops at all. And he has not been forceful about the riots since.

He set up a commission to study riot problems with instructions not to make its final report until next summer.

When Johnson was Senate majority leader he knew no one could achieve anything by giving orders to the other 99 senators. Solutions were obtained through compromises, sometimes called a consensus. In the presidency Johnson has given few examples of decisive leadership. Rather, he gives the impression of using his Senate technique of seeking consensus, or trying to determine public reaction, before moving.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

President To Try 'Fireside Chats'

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

Scheduled to begin before Labor Day, the broadcasts from the White House will be used to rally public support for the administration's stalled domestic legislative program for the cities and its beleaguered Vietnam war strategy.

The President, taking a page from the political notebook of the late Franklin D. Rooseevelt, is counting on these personal pep talks to bolster his sagging popularity, now at an all-time low according to the latest national polls.

Details of these and other future political plans of the President were made known this week to Democratic congressional leaders when they appealed to the White House for help to get the administration's legislative program "Moving again" in Congress.

IN THEIR FRANK backstage discussions, the House and Senate leaders prodded the President into action House and Senate leaders prodgram and, in particular, his call for more taxes, will need all the support he can personally muster to pass Congress at this session.

Speaker John McCormack, D-Mass., reported that the climate in Congress has, if anything, hardened against Great Society programs in the wake of racial riots. If there is to be action, he warned, it will require personal leadership by the President.

Other Democratic leaders stressed this need, pointing out that Vice President Humphrey, assigned to push the administration's legislative proposals, had temporarily at least, rendered himself useless on Capitol Hill by his public criticism of Congress.

REPUBLICAN POLITICS — Visitors report that former President Eisenhower is taking a much more active interest in the selection of next year's Republican candidates than he did three years ago.

Instead of remaining aloof as in 1964, the former President is letting it be known he will endorse one candidate before the GOP national convention delegates convene in Miami a year from now.

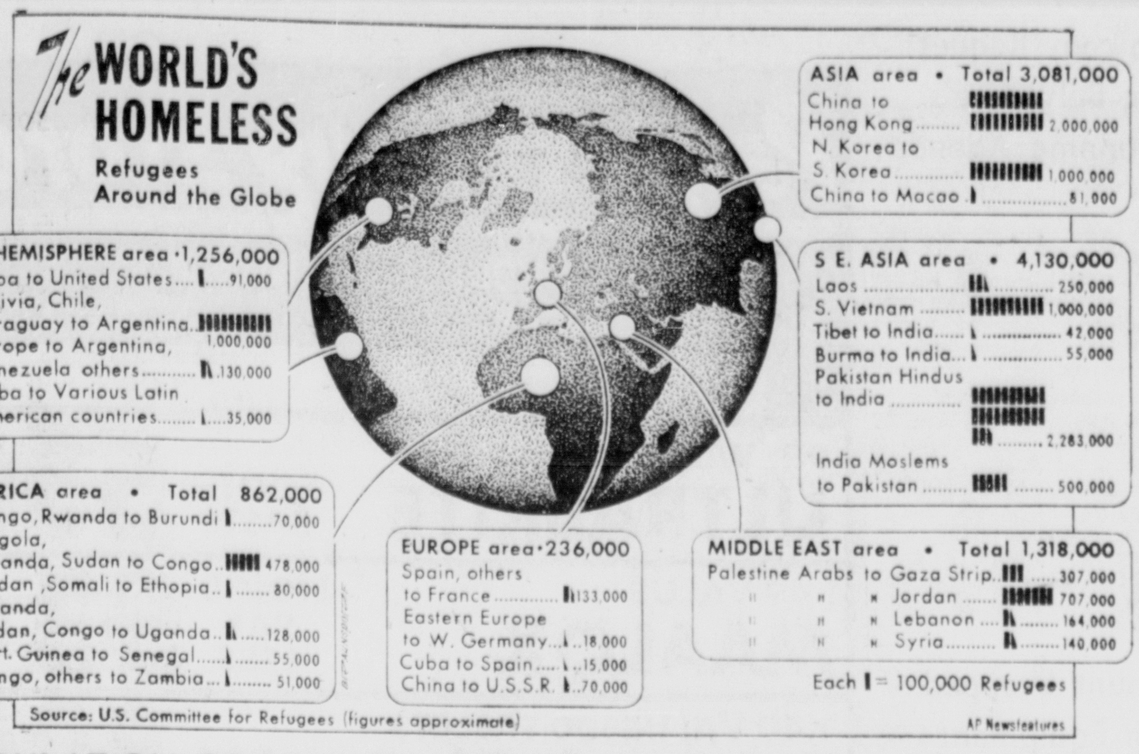
While not closing the door to other candidates, Eisenhower at present is boosting former Vice President Nixon and Michigan's Governor Romney.

His callers also are saying Eisenhower believes both California's Gov. Ronald Reagan and Illinois' Sen. Charles Percy should pass up 1968 — and wait four more years to run.

POLITICAL FUNDS — Participation by government employee unions in fund-raising dinners for individual members of Congress and the Democratic and Republican National Committees is one of the areas under study by the little-known Commission on Political Activity of Government Personnel.

This panel, headed by Dr. Arthur Flemming, was set up by Congress last year to study and make recommendations for revising the Hatch Act. Recently, the commission voted to probe the extent of political participation by postal and federal employee unions through purchases of tickets to political fund-raising affairs.

The commission's task is to determine whether these activities are a violation of the spirit of the Hatch Act, if not actually covered by it. Also it seeks to determine whether the law should have more specific language regulating such sctivities and require detailed reporting to the Civil Service Commission of such political contributions.



POPULATION OF LONDON, PARIS

Over 11 Million Homeless In World

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Combine the populations of Paris and London, and you'll fall just short of the world's refugee total — 11,226,000.

And that total was taken before the present Arab-Israeli conflict broke out. The Middle East crisis has created about 200,000 new refugees — almost equal in number to the population of Mobile, Ala., Providence, R.I., or Jacksonville, Fla.

Twelve to 13 thousand of the new fugitives are Palestinians in Syria, says the U. N. Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East. That means they're "two-time refugees" — former residents of Palestine who settled in Syrian refugee camps after their lands were partitioned to create the state of Israel. Israeli occupation of southern Syria has forced them out of the camps and set them on the road again.

But even these thousands of homeless are only a fraction of the totals from Africa and Asia. The U.S. Committee for Refugees counts 2 million fugitives in Hong Kong, a refugee total that is "conservative" — from India to Pakistan, Russia "Old Believers" now living in South America, Laotians driven from their homes by the recent conflict, even 400 Tibetans who have fled to Switzerland to escape their country's Communist takeover. Tribal conflicts, shifting borders, and post-colonial tensions continue to spell refugee trouble in Africa — which few Americans would identify as a top refugee disaster area.

Many agencies and governments are supplying aid to refugees. The United Nations, backed by many states, operates two refugee divisions — the office of the High Commissioner for Refugees and the Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East.

In the U. S., CARE gives emergency aid and long-term education to refugees all over the world. Church World Service, the U. S. Catholic Conference, and the International Rescue Committee have found homes and jobs for almost 150,000 fugitives from Castro's Cuba. The U. S. Department of State resettles fugitives from Eastern Europe, coordinates flights from Cuba, gives vocational training and medical aid to the homeless in Hong Kong and Macao, and distributes food to Asian and African refugees — at a cost of over $200 million each year.

But the world's homeless have grown by almost 4 million in the last two years — a rate which may soon outstrip even these massive aid programs.

In the Middle East alone, the number of refugees rises by about 30,000 each year and has doubled since the fugitives' arrival in the camps. "There's a natural population increase — and then the children become refugees," says Lindsay Ayen of the U. S. Committee for Refugees.

Refugees are often stranded in the camps partly because of a second difficulty — lack of skills. Eighty per cent of the original Arab refugees were farmers, shepherds and unskilled or handicapped workers. "They had no particular trade, so they weren't wanted anywhere," says Miss Ayen.

Getting a job in another country is only part of the unskilled refugee's problem; even getting into that other nation may be impossible. U. S. immigration laws, which operate in favor of professional workers, have blocked the entrance of many unskilled Cubans who try to enter this courtry from Spain, says the Rev. John Schauer of Church World Service.

Refugee problems are stubborn, surprisingly long-lasting: France still harbors more than 70,000 Republican fugitives from the Spanish civil war of the late 1930s. And another reason for the problems' persistence is the refugees' own attitude.

Most Eastern Europeans displaced by World War II were only too willing to be resettled outside their homelands, where many of them remembered past persecution or feared future danger from Communist rule. But many Arab refugees don't want to be integrated into a new community.

Congresswoman Shirley?

Ex-Moppet Eyes GOP Campaign

By ROBERT STRAND

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Shirley Temple for Congress?

Maybe yes. The former skipper of the "Good Ship Lollipop" is thinking of signing on as a crew member of the Ship of State.

Now Mrs. Shirley Temple Black, the brightest child star of the 1930's is making her decision on whether to run for the House of Representatives in a special election.

If she should go to Washington, Shirley would be joining her one-time co-star, California's Sen. George Murphy. Like Murphy and Gov. Ronald Reagan, a familiar face on television's late show, she is a Republican.

Her chances of winning a seat vacated by the death of Rep. J. Arthur Younger are considered excellent.

"Everyone in the county realizes all we have to do is to put her up and we'll win," a GOP leader said. The district is usually Republican, and Shirley is Republican.

"I'll try to make up my mind as soon as possible," she said recently. "I'm honored that people are apparently interested in my candidacy.

"But don't forget, it's not Shirley Temple, now. It's Mrs. Charles Black, and that's the way I like it."

The most famous moppet of the movies was referring to her drop-out from Hollywood with a 1950 marriage to Charles Black, son of the late board chairman of the huge Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

Since then, the Blacks have been leading a relatively quiet life in Atherton, a swanky suburb of San Francisco.

But she appears to have retained the actress' flair for the dramatic. Having said she is considering a political career, she also has promised to make a public announcement—one way or the other—when she has reached a decision, which might be this week or maybe next.

Until rather recently, her husband worked as an executive at Ampex Corp. Now he occupies himself with his own business interests and in the service of Governor Reagan.

She usually stays in the background at numerous socialite functions, but her spunk put her back on front pages last year when she quit as a director of the San Francisco International Film Festival in protest against showing of the Swedish film, "Night Games."

She said the movie was "pornography for profit". It ran for several months.

"Night Games" certainly was different from the kind of cinema that Shirley knew at the peaks of her career.

Spotted in a ballet studio at the age of 4, she was signed with 20th Century-Fox as a bit performer, but within months she burst into stardom.

Within four years, the moppet made 20 pictures and saved the Fox organization from financial disaster. At the age of 9, she earned $307,014, annually the nation's seventh highest salary and more than the president of General Motors.

Shirley, who for a time outranked Clark Gable, Joan Crawford and all other Hollywood stars, usually played orphans and waifs who sang and danced their ways out of terrifying situations into the hearts of kind families all over the world.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt saw the child as a force in the nation's spiritual recovery from the depression.

"When the spirit of the people is lower than at any other time," Roosevelt once said, "it is a splendid thing that for just 15 cents an American can go to a movie and look at the smiling face of a baby and forget his troubles."

Does she feel her background doesn't suit her for the role of a member of Congress? She probably answered the question in 1964 when, referring to song-and-dance man George Murphy's senate bid, she said:

"Don't forget we had a president once who was a haberdasher."

Behind The News

Hippies May Like Indians, But Indians Say They're 'Just Bums'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— There's an Indian-hippie war of sorts going on in San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury District, home of the "flower children," and the Indians are giving no quarter.

Center of the Indians' fight is the headquarters of the American Indian Historical Society located just off Haight Street and leading the battle to preserve Indian culture against hippie infiltration is the society's founder and president, Rupert Costo, 61.

Costo, a full-blooded Cahuilla, went on the warpath against the hippies when a local columnist suggested "the hippies are American Indians . . . the gathering of beaded and bearded tribes has begun in San Francisco."

Costo conceded that hippies occasionally wander into the society's building to view its art museum and Indian lore, and that some of them sport Indian blankets, beads and feathers in headbands.

But, he said sternly, "The way of the hippies is completely at variance with that of the Indian. It is the way of the bum."

Costo thinks the wearing of Indian garb by hippies is designed mainly to take advantage of certain Southwest Indian religious rites, such as the use of the hallucinatory drug, peyote. But there can be no real comparison between the Indian and the hippie.

"Indian life, even in aboriginal times, was highly ordered," he said. "Everyone worked. No Indian would ever take peyote for kicks. And, by God, no Indian went unbathed."

Lloyd House, a Navajo and member of the Arizona State Legislature, was a recent visitor to Costo's headquarters and had his first look at the flower children.

"The hippie says he likes the Indian life and many of them feel that means free love and drugs," he said.

"They're wrong if they think we use peyote as a drug. Peyote is used as wine and bread is in Christian churches."

"And an Indian used to be killed by other Indians for being unfaithful to his wife. Indians are clean. Holy mackeral! The Spanish ordered the Indians not to wash so much."

THIS WEEK In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

American fighter-bombers swooped low over a giant bridge spanning North Vietnam's Ky Chung River, released their bombs and zoomed back into the sky. "We got it! It's down!" radioed Navy Cmdr. Gene Tissott of Chino, Calif.

Tissott and his fellow pilots had just carried the Vietnam war to within 10 miles of Communist China, knocking out — at least temporarily — a bridge described by American officials as a key supply link between Red China and North Vietnam. A second bridge within a mile of the first was knocked out in air raids the next day.

The step-up in the air war — with the personal approval of President Johnson — was aimed at cutting the major flow of war material to North Vietnam from Red China. Previously, American planes had struck no closer than 30 miles from China.

Around The World; Around The Clock

Washington: The Senate voted 48 to 45 to rescind the Defense Department's authority to sell arms to developing countries which use the Export-Import Bank for easy loans.

Washington: George Romney, Republican governor of Michigan, said during appearances in Washington that he believes the Republicans will make peace a major issue in the 1968 presidential campaign.

Shell Lake, Sask.: A killer came to the remote farm home of James Peterson sometime during the night Monday and methodically shot and killed Peterson, his wife and seven of their eight children at home. Phyllis Peterson, 4, the only survivor of the terrible night, said she saw a stranger in their house before the killings, but authorities did not rule out the possibility that the killer was a neighbor.

Jerusalem: Despite heavy pressure from both inside and outside the government, the Israeli cabinet voted to allow Arabs to return to their homes on the west bank of the Jordan River, overrun by the Israelis during the Arab-Israeli war, but decided to establish rigid security checks.

Atlanta: Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said at the organization's convention that it would begin leading massive but non-violent demonstrations for Negro rights in America's big cities. Later in the week, King announced he would not support President Johnson in the 1968 presidential election because of Johnson's Vietnam policies.

Washington: The House Post Office Committee approved an increase in first class mail postage rates from five to six cents and an increase in the post card rate from four to five cents.

SACRAMENTO SCENE

Judge Marks Win Over Burton Boosts GOP Majority Chances

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Republican stock jumped a few points Tuesday when Milton Marks, San Francisco judge and former assemblyman, won the special election in the bay city to fill the seat of the late Sen. Eugene McAteer, defeating his Democratic opponent, Assemblyman John L. Burton, by a close margin of 5,700 votes.

More than 200,000 ballots were cast in the heavily-contested election, which drew support for Marks from Gov. Ronald Reagan as head of the California GOP contingent and from national officials, including Vice-President Humphrey, for Burton.

Marks' election evened up the State Senate, which now has 20 Republicans and 20 Democrats, with the deciding vote in the hands of Lt.-Gov. Robert Finch, a Republican.

Governor Reagan, after the Marks' victory, declared the Republicans "are going to cease being the minority party in California."

GOP control of the Senate is likely to mean some shuffling of important committees in that house, with more Republican control.

School bill mix-up:

As Governor Reagan prepared to sign AB 272, by Assemblyman Jesse M. Unruh, the major school aid bill of the 1967 session, the California Taxpayers Association warned him that the measure contained an "error of omission" which placed school districts "in a precarious financial situation."

Failure of the bill to change areawide tax powers, the association said, would cost the state some $50 million over and above available funds.

Governor Reagan signed the bill anyhow, and his office is attempting to straighten the matter out through administrative procedures in the department of education. The association said the governor may have to call a special session of the legislature to correct the measure.

Two meetings to discuss the controversial subject of college tuition are slated, first the California Co-Ordinating council for higher education, and second, the Board of Regents of the University of California.

The co-ordinating council meets in San Francisco August 24. While the council has no authority to decide the matter, its recommendations are expected to carry much weight when the regents meet in Los Angeles August 30 and 31. The staff of Governor Reagan is prepared to present the governor's plan for "equal education", which envolves both tuition for all students at the university, and government aid for those who cannot afford a university education.

A decision on tuition at the university is up to the board of regents. However, legislative action is required to put it into effect in the state colleges.

The state lands commission approved purchase by the City of Long Beach of the Cunard liner Queen Mary, for more than $3 million from state tidelands oil revenue. Estimates of other costs including delivery and refurbishing, bring the total from tideland oil revenues to be expended to $5,311,500. The city plans to use the liner as a tourist attraction, "rivaling Disneyland."

Once again, it is anticipated the Right-to-work issue will come to the forefront in California. A new organization, known as Californians for Right-To-Work, has been incorporated and papers filed with Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan. Officials of the organization indicate they first intent to seek a right-to-work law from the legislature, and that failing, they will consider an initiative.

California defeated an initiative in 1958, and at the same time rejected its prime sponsor, former U.S. Sen. William F. Knowland, as governor. Principal provision of the right-to-work law guarantees the right to a job without the requirement of belonging to a labor union. The proposal was defeated with heavy labor union opposition.

Highway construction will be stepped up to the extend of $52 million, the governor's office reported, as the result of operating economics and low competitive bids. Plan is to advance 13 major highway projects in California with the unexpected funds.

Redwood Park issue came up again last week when Assemblyman Edwin I. Z'Berg, D-Sacramento, chairman of the committee on natural resources, released an extensive study of the plan for a national redwood park.

The report recommended the park be located in the Redwood-Prairie Creek area in Humboldt county and rejected Governor Reagans' plan for swapping national forest lands for privately held areas, suggesting instead that private owners get a cash reimbursement.

Congress, however, which has the final say, is not expected to take action this year.

Bill Signing: Governor Reagan is signing bills by the score, most of them of minor nature. Some, however mark significant progress in legislation and progress. One is SB 1523, which provides for a complete inventory of all tax-exempt land in California, which may turn out to be a material aid in restoring some of this pubic land to the tax rolls.

There are more bank robbers in California than in other states, but they don't make as much, according to a report issued by Attorney General Thomas Lynch. The report covered some 35 years of bank robberies in California and announced the fact that this state now has exceeded in number the robberies during the great depression, of the 1930's.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Gardening Left To The Family Boss

Mr. and Mrs. George Ray O'Connell of Belvedere will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary today, five days early.

Ray O'Connell has the distinction of being one of the oldest living natives of the Tiburon Peninsula. He says he will be 72 years old on Dec. 10, but his wife will only admit she "was a teen-ager 50 years ago."

TIBURON NATIVE

Ray O'Connell remembers when the population of the Tiburon Peninsula was between 200 and 300 people. He was born in 1895 on the Old Lagoon, where Tiburon's main firehouse now stands on Tiburon Boulevard.

O'Connell's father worked for the San Francisco-North Pacific Railroad (later Northwestern Pacific Railroad) for 44 years, some of which were spent in the roundhouse on the Tiburon railroad yard.

Ray O'Connell went to newly built Tiburon School on Mar West and Esparanza streets, where he graduated from the eighth grade in 1910. He recalls that eighth-graders had to journey to San Rafael High School to take their final examinations.

O'Connell started to learn butchering, then became a dispatcher for the railroad, finally a machinist, which became his life's trade. He holds a life membership in the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, after 50 years of membership.

'ROPE BELL'

He served on the fire department in the Tiburon railroad yard.

He and other old-timers remember the railroad fire crew was the only one in the area for several years, but there were then only a few houses in Tiburon.

The fire signal was given by a "rope bell," according to O'Connell and "you had to have pull to get on the fire department, because you got half a day off on Saturday."

He remembers two occasions when Main Street burned down. In September, 1906, the Sonomas House Hotel, the butcher shop and "the whole town" burned. In 1921, Main Street had another all-encompassing fire.

O'Connell worked on the Butte-Anaconda-and-Pacific Railroad in Anaconda, Montana, where he met his future wife, Ruby Zanina Patterson. They were married Aug. 24, 1917, in Old St. Mary's Cathedral, San Francisco.

Three weeks after their marriage, he was drafted into the Army during World War I, and served in England, France and Belgium.

TO RICHMOND

After the war they lived in the family home in Tiburon for a year, then moved to the Belvedere Annex on Beach Road, where the present city offices are. Their six-room apartment cost $25 a month.

His work took him to Richmond where they lived for three years, before moving to San Francisco for 36 years. In December, 1960, he retired from the Crown Cork Seal Co., San Francisco, and they moved back to their present home in Belvedere on San Rafael Avenue, which they have remodeled.

O'Connell divides his retirement days between fishing trips on a friend's boat and caring for his exotic dahlias and fuchsias in the garden. He and his wife are members of the Redwood Shade Garden Club.

O'Connell is a member of the Elks Club of Richmond and the 91st Division of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Mrs. O'Connell belongs to that organization's auxiliary.

Mrs. O'Connell served as a volunteer with the U.S. Coast Guard Port Security Force in San Francisco during World War II. She is a past member of the Coast Guard League. Of her wartime service, she said, "We worked hard, but the uniforms were so good looking."

Today, at Sabella's Restaurant, their golden wedding anniversary will be celebrated at a party given by O'Connell's nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lacey of San Francisco, and his brother-in-law and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McQuaid of Larkspur.

Training Center Aid To Be Viewed

The Family Service Agency of Marin County appointed a committee this week to study financing of its Institute on the Family, and to seek new funds for the year-old training center.

Private grants and tuition fees last year financed training for 184 students from throughout Northern California, according to Mrs. Thomas Dorst, board president.

Guilty Plea To Burglary

Robert Alan Gerard, 25, pleaded quilty in Marin Municipal Court yesterday to burglary, and was certified to Marin Superior Court for sentencing at 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Gerard, of 7 Excelsior Lane, Sausalito, burgled Oshkosh B'Gosh, Sausalito psychedelic poster shop, Sunday. Sausalito police saw him leave the building.

Balcony Request On Belvedere's Planning Agenda

Belvedere Planning Commission will hear a report Monday from building inspector Rudy Kopfer who is investigating whether a balcony on Dr. Gus A. Raney's residence, 3 Bellevue Avenue, Corinthian Island, encroaches on the next-door lot.

A continued matter of a request from Stevens Manning, 296 Beach Road, for permission to fence a lane that ends at his dock will also be considered.

The commission will meet at 8 p.m. at Whitaker Hall.

Count Dropped On Equipment

Felony complaint of concealing two stolen auto wheels and other equipment was dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court against Leo Woodrow Baker, 27, on recommendation of Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael Anthony.

He told Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. that Baker, of 237 Morning Sun Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, was absolved of the crime because it was proven that the wheels he had were in his possession prior to theft of the items.

He had been accused of having equipment taken from Ronald Hall of 5 Portola Avenue, Santa Venetia.

IN THE SYLVAN SETTING of the new amphitheater constructed in Forest Meadows on the Dominican College campus, San Rafael, an audience enjoys a Marin Shakespeare Festival performance. The comfortable bench seats have backrests, and the stage is clearly visible from all points. The reflecting pool adds an appropriate idyllic touch.

A Stage For Shakespeare

Marin Festival Finds New Home In Wooded Setting

The 26 wooded acres that make up the Forest Meadows section of the Dominican College campus in northeastern San Rafael has been the site of such diverse events as Boy Scout camporees, automobile shows and Marin Music Chest concerts.

But Sausalito residents John and Ann Brebner saw it as the ideal home for outdoor Shakespearean drama.

Their reaction to Forest Meadows with the towering eucalyptus and evergreen trees was much the same as they had experienced seven years earlier one rainy November afternoon while wandering around the grounds of the also tree-studded Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

"WE LOOKED around us, and, almost simultaneously, thought: What a perfect place for a Shakespeare production!" John Brebner recalls. "We could see almost unlimited possibilities."

Others were swept along by the Brebners' vision and enthusiasm, and the result of a surge of community interest was the Marin Shakespeare Festival, based in the Marin Art and Garden Center.

Unfortunately, it developed, there was one crucial limitation that the site imposed upon the festival. Increasing attendance made seating space more and more a problem.

THE HUNT began for a new site. And Forest Meadows became a natural target, since it possessed much of the quiet wooded, natural beauty that had earlier attracted the Brebners to the art and garden center.

For instance, Sister Patrick points out, since Dominican College is the summer-time campus for Catholic University of Washington, D. C., the locating of a major Shakespearean festival upon the grounds would enhance greatly the cultural and intellectual stimulation available to the visiting students.

THERE IS ALSO the possibility of sometime in the future offering college credits to students for work done in conjunction with the festival.

"The problems were complex," he admits. "We wanted to design a theater that would be in keeping with the natural forest setting and would disturb

"Why Do Insects Eat Cloth?"

Insects are not especially anxious to eat cloth. They do enjoy the soil that fabrics hold. Most common hungry insects are moths, beetles, crickets, roaches, silverfish and firebrats. Silverfish thrive in damp, cool places, especially basements; firebrats live and develop in hot dark places, around furnaces, fire-places, and insulation around hot water and heat pipes.

Silverfish and crickets are known to damage cellulose particularly when starch or glue are present. Carpet beetles and moths are known to chew through other fabrics to get at wool.

Some time ago the National Institute of Drycleaning made tests of cleaned and food-stained fabrics exposed to larvae of carpet beetles and similar larvae. Results indicated that food-soiled fabrics, either natural or man-made fibers, would be eaten by the larvae while no damage was noted to identical clean fibers.

The point appears to be that care should be taken that clothing be cleaned before being stored for protection's sake. Insects lose their appetites for clean clothing.

a minimum number of existing trees. We wanted to offer seating for a large audience, yet give that audience a feeling of intimacy.

"AND WE HAD to keep always in mind that the theater should be useful for other cultural events such as music and ballet, as well as plays."

The design he worked out for the Forest Meadows Amphitheater included such unusual conceptions as a reflective pool in front of the stage, the use of earthen beams to reduce sound from not-too-distant Highway 101, and the installation of permanent lighting and sound equipment that did not intrude upon the quiet, uncluttered mood of the meadows.

THE ARCHITECT, designer of many Marin homes, is a former Tiburon resident, now living in San Francisco.

The $60,000 construction contract went to a Marin firm, H. S. Meinberger and Sons of San Rafael.

Despite uncommonly inclement weather, Meinberger was determined to complete the project in time for the opening of the 1967 Shakespearean summer season. And he and his men succeeded.

"I'VE LIVED in Marin since 1950," Meinberger explains, and I realized the need for this new cultural facility. My men seemed to share my interest. For whenever the heavy rains slowed us down, the workmen would pitch in with greater enthusiasm than ever, and make up for the lost time."

The result was that on July 15, with appropriate Elizabethan pomp and pageantry, the amphitheater off Grand Avenue was opened formally, and the seventh annual Marin Shakespeare Festival began with a performance of "Twelfth Night" before 600 theater-goers.

THE BEAUTY of the surroundings and the magnificent reflecting pool caused one theater critic to term the Forest Meadows amphitheater "one of the country's most elegant outdoor theaters."

Brebners, both with long careers in the theater and both having studied at Britain's famed Old Vic Theater School, has established itself firmly as a community asset and tradition.

Since the first festival opened with "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the company has presented 14 productions to increasing attendances.

THIS YEAR "Twelfth Night" and "King Lear" are alternating in the new amphitheater, playing Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, starting at 8:30.

Indicative of the prestige the Marin festival has acquired have been the tributes paid it by a man who has never seen one of the productions, and, for that matter, has never set foot upon these United States.

Twice P. W. Walker, mayor of Stratford-on-Avon, William Shakespeare's "hometown," has seen fit to issue formal proclamations saluting the Marin festival.

MAYOR WALKER would, the Brebners feel, be all the more enthusiastic if he could visit and see for himself the idyllic Marin site where the Bard's great works are currently being performed.

For that matter, so would Shakespeare himself.

THE BREBNERS, John and Ann, executive directors of the Marin Shakespeare Festival, were frequent visitors to the site where the new outdoor theater was taking shape among the trees of Forest Meadows.

A Housewife, And Concert-Opera Artist

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Many Marin acquaintances of Mrs. John Schickling, San Anselmo housewife, mother and College of Marin student, will be astonished to hear that she is also Sarah Fleming, dramatic soprano who has had a distinguished career in opera, concert and oratorio.

And they will be more surprised to learn that she is to be the soloist Wednesday evening for the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra pops concert under the direction of Arthur Fiedler at San Francisco Civic Auditorium. She will sing works by Tchaikovsky, Wagner and Verdi.

Singing in pops concerts is not new for Sarah, for one of her first professional engagements was with the St. Paul pops concerts when she was 18. They are still given there now, she says, and include ice skating spectaculars.

"I SHOWED inclinations toward singing long before I learned to talk, mother tells me," she says, "and as soon as I had learned to talk, I made it clear that I was going to be an opera star when I grew up.

"I was born in Columbus, Ohio, and lived in the suburbs of Chicago until we moved to St. Paul. My mother, an accomplished pianist, believe in developing my talents gradually, and I began voice study with Mady Metzger-Ziegler in St. Paul when I was 17."

Within a month after she started vocal lessons, Sarah was winning scholarships and prizes from local organizations, including the Kiwanis Club, whose members, within three hours after she sang at their dinner, subscribed money for a scholarship to send her to Hamline University in St. Paul.

WHILE A freshman there she made her professional debut as soloist with the St. Paul Civic Orchestra before a cheering audience of 12,000 people. The result was another scholarship to New York's Juilliard School of Music.

In 1955 after she received her Bachelor of Science Degree in music from Juilliard, she was given the first Rodgers and Hammerstein Award for "outstanding vocal achievement." Then came summer fellowships to the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood. The same year she made her New York City Opera debut as Micaela in "Carmen," and she remained with that company for three seasons.

From 1955 to 1960 she appeared as soloist in concerts with the Boston, New Orleans, Minneapolis, Pittsburg and many other symphonies under Columbia Artists Management, and gave recitals for community concert audiences in key American cities and in Canada.

AMONG CHORAL societies which have featured her as soloist in oratorio is the famed Winter Park, Fla., Bach Festival, and she filled engagements with New York's distinguished American Opera Society.

She has also appeared on NBC's "Tonight" show on television, as well as NBC radio's "Best of All" with Skitch Henderson and CBS-TV's Gary Moore show. Frequently she sang with the Goldman band in New York's Central Park mall during summer months.

In the summer of 1959 Sarah received critical acclaim in the leading role of Rosalinda in "Die Fledermaus" with the Central City Opera Festival in Colorado. In the 1959-60 season of the Mexican National Opera in Mexico City she sang the title role of Lauretta in "Panfilo and Lauretta" by Carlos Chavez in its premiere performance.

SHE HAS many stories to tell of singing under such conductors as Antol Dorati, Eric Leinsdorf, Julius Rudel and Karl Fritz and of performing with such notables as Siepi, Tourel, Elias, Vickers and Basil Rathbone.

In 1959 Sarah was married to John Schickling, a tenor who had sung in musicals, motion pictures and Broadway productions, and who at that time was community concerts representative for Columbia Artists management. They were on their honeymoon while she was singing Rosalinda in Central City.

"WE HAD moved to Erie, Pa., where my husband was managing the Erie Symphony," she recalls, "and I was singing in Mexico City when the mezzo soprano in 'Panfilo and Lauretta' threw me a little too hard during a scene — most people didn't know I was pregnant — and the result was that our son Robert was born in Erie two months premature. For a long SOPRANO SARAH Fleming's sons enjoy learning songs and singing them with her. They are shown at their home in San Anselmo singing some of the tunes from "The Sound of Music." The boys are Robert, 7, left, who thinks his mother's practicing is "interesting," and Andrew, 5.

"I was literally thrown from a career into motherhood in a matter of two months," she says.

"After two years we went to Seattle, where John was assistant manager of the Seattle Symphony and involved in public relations with the World's Fair.

"OUR SECOND son Andrew was born at this time, and from then on my life as wife and mother absorbed all of my time and energy until recently since the boys have been in school.

"I believe that a woman cannot be a success in both career and marriage without one or the other suffering. I feel that my family comes first and my career second."

The Schicklings moved to San Anselmo six years ago when John gave up the music business. He is at present director of sales for the Edgewater Inn in Oakland. Their home was selected as the first foster home for Sunny Hills, and for nearly two years they have had Carleton MacDonald as a foster son. Now 18, he will be off to Michigan State next month.

WITH THE boys in school Sarah has been doing some teaching and has accepted some engagements.

STARRING AS Rosalinda in the opera "Die Fledermaus" at the Central City Opera Festival in Colorado was one of the highlights of soprano Sarah Fleming's career. She is pictured in one of her favorite costumes for the role. Now a San Anselmo housewife, mother and College of Marin student, she is resuming professional appearances on an occasional basis.

Diablo, Richmond and Oakland symphonies," she reports. "I had previously sung in California in community and college recitals in Redwood City, Petaluma, Los Gatos, Redding, Santa Rosa, Susanville and Eureka.

"Last summer, taking the boys with me, I went to Los Angeles as the understudy of the grand duchess in 'The Student Prince' in the beautiful new music pavilion, and I sang in the production that ran seven weeks there and seven weeks in San Francisco, returning just in time to put the boys in school."

"WHEN I sing," she continues, "it is strictly on a professional basis. That's why I don't sing at teas and other private affairs.

"I want to continue improving my voice and have begun study with Ione Pastori-Rix in San Francisco. My aim is to sing professionally occasionally to satisfy my own personal needs and some day in addition to teaching voice privately to be an instructor on the college level, as I was at Dominican one summer."

It was this ambition which led to Sarah's becoming a student in College of Marin evening classes under strange circumstances.

SHE IS taking science courses to make up for undergraduate work she did not have at Juilliard. Since none of her Juilliard credits are accepted in California, she will also have to take college entrance examinations before she can go on to get her master's degree in music and teaching credentials.

"It seems ironical," she points out, "that California will not accept my B.S. Degree in music from Juilliard when music students in California are sent on to Juilliard for post-graduate work. The reason, it seems, is that I was graduated in 1955, and the accreditation board did not decide to include professional schools until 1956.

"AND SO instead of studying music and talking about Bach and Beethoven, I'm taking paleontology, geology and biology, and talking about igneous rocks and the amniote egg."

The Four Duffy Sisters And Their Art

Members Of Pioneer Marin Family Fill Their Hours With Creativity

By LAURA DEVENDORF

But there are several aspects to the exhibit that opens Monday at the Torrance Gallery in San Anselmo and continues through Sept. 29 that make it unusual.

For one thing, there will be four artists — all sisters.

THE DUFFY sisters are longtime residents of Marin County who have led lives rich with teaching, writing, film-making, children and grandchildren. But they only recently moved into their newest field of interest —art.

They've been at it five years now.

"And they paint surprisingly well," states William Torrance, gallery owner, in speaking of the three painting Duffy sisters. A fourth, Ethel Turner, will be showing her "golden saucers," works of art of concave glass upon which she gold-leafs primitive Mayan and Aztec symbols, then backs with soft kid.

THE PROCESS, according to her sisters, is exclusively her own.

But like her sisters, Mrs. Turner, who lives now in Cuernavaca, Mexico, has had a far different lifetime career. She has authored poetry and several books, including "One Way Ticket" which was made into a movie, and another on Mexican history.

OF THE OTHER sisters, Jean Peters is married to a retired lieutenant colonel and works at the San Rafael Public Library. Grace Zubler taught school in Tiburon for three years, and at San Quentin for another three, and Alma Zang taught at San Quentin for 16 years.

Both Mrs. Zubler and Mrs. Zang belong to the Retired School Teachers Association of Marin.

All four sisters have children, and the grandchildren among them also add up, in Mrs. Zang's case to 14.

WITH ALL these things happening in their lives, one wonders how they ever came to art. They had, however, been exposed.

Marin residents since 1895 when their father settled at San Quentin, the family attended art exhibits in San Francisco.

"My mother," Mrs. Zang recalls, "was always interested in art and showed a real appreciation. When we went to shows we analyzed them and were aware of what the artists were trying to do."

AND SHE REMEMBERS youthful summers spent in Carmel, an art colony then so fresh and new that there were no lights and you carried lanterns to light your way, but a place so pulsing with the talent of the day "it was an inspiration just to be present in the room with those stimulating minds."

A Show By The Duffy Sisters

You can feel that atmosphere as this charming woman speaks and you also have the feeling that she must have been much at home in it. Her lively mind absorbs all manners of things quickly and enthusiastically.

Certainly this was true concerning her newest career. All it took was reading the book "Weekend Painter" for her to decide then and there, "That's for me!"

SOON AFTER, she and her sister Grace attended an art show at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross. They were approached and asked if they were artists.

"No," Mrs. Zang replied, "But I'm going to paint!"

"And are you going to take lessons?"

"Yes, I am." And there followed the suggestion that she try Troy Ruddick.

SHE AND Grace started the next day. A few days later their sister Jean came around to watch a lesson.

"We didn't think she'd really be interested," Mrs. Zang relates. "But she couldn't wait to get her hands on a brush and get started."

"The lessons were from 10 o'clock until 3 and I could never get them out until 4. They were that enthusiastic!

"THEY WERE excellent students, cheerful, eager to learn, they took criticism beautifully and were interested in everything. I taught them the mechanics of mixing and applying colors —the craft itself —then let them do what they wanted. They wanted to paint realistically and they were doing very well at it and even selling."

Asked about their preference for realism, Mrs. Zang replies, "Don't the 'in' people say they paint the way they do because they are expressing their feelings? Well, I don't always see it or get the message. We have open minds and should and do want to learn more about it. We do like some abstract art but we haven't studied long enough and it's not the way we paint."

After the lessons with Ruddick, there were "spasmodic lessons" with Nevin Kempthorne, Helen Conser and June Lederman, painting all the time, and now their Torrance show.

EVEN THEIR attitude about that big event has been lighthearted but highly professional.

Torrance had first suggested to Mrs. Zang that she have a show. In response she asked, "How about a show of the four Duffy sisters? But don't say anything until you see what we can do."

About the five years leading up to it, Mrs. Zang has this to say, "I've never been so frustrated in my ife but I've never had so much fun being frustrated in my life but I've challenge, but it's amazing that something you have never done before can still turn out so well.

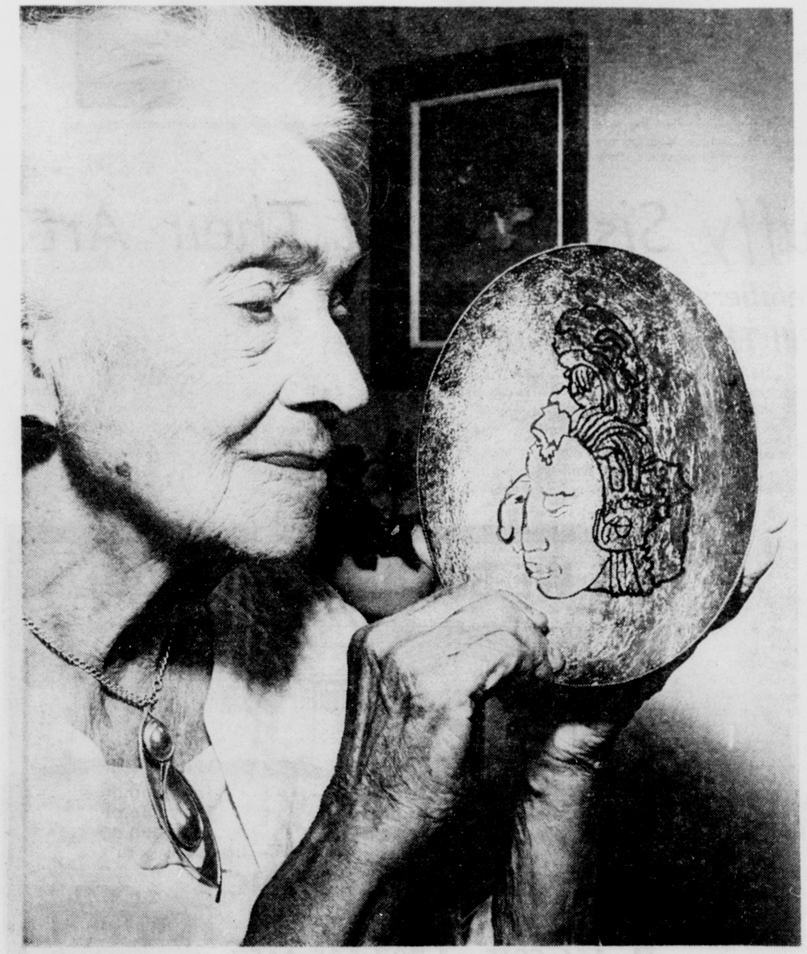
"IT'S A WONDERFUL hobby which I'd recommend for anyone and you certainly don't have time to be bored."

The Duffy sisters, whose ages range from about 60 to 80, especially urge that persons at the retirement age, with the prospect of a sudden increase in their leisure time, consider the satisfactions and rewards that art can hold for them.

This represents one of their biggest hopes for their Torrance Gallery show — that it will inspire others to take up brush and paints and share with them the enjoyment of a sudden discovery of their artistic potential.

"There is," says Mrs. Zang," no reason or excuse to vegetate. A person, regardless of age or talent, can put his or her time to a creative, fulfilling use."

JEAN PETERS, wife of retired Lt. Col. Edward A. Peters, is one of the four artistically-gifted Duffy sisters, three of whom took up painting only five years ago. So accomplished have they become in that short time that their work will be shown through Sept. 29 at the Torrance Gallery in San Anselmo. Mrs. Peters shows one of her landscapes. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)



THE NON-PAINTER among the four Duffy sisters, Ethel Turner produces a distinctive form of art of her own—golden saucers upon which primitive Mayan and Aztec symbols are imprinted in gold-leaf.

GRACE ZUBLER, a former school teacher at Tiburon and San Quentin, began studying art five years ago. Like her sisters, she prefers to produce realistic paintings such as these.

THE READING OF the book, "Weekend Painter," first fixed in Alma Zang's mind the idea of taking up painting. It soon snowballed into a family project, joined by her sisters.

Traveling With Children Requires Careful Planning

The Travel Page

Can you keep a child sitting in one seat quietly for seven hours as you fly across the Atlantic?

If you're thinking of traveling with children the American Society of Travel Agents has some timely advice which may save you inconvenience, money, and heartache.

Common sense is basic. So, too, is expert advice from a professional travel agent who can help you judge the suitability of facilities and accommodations, arrange your transportation, and give you expert advice on how to make traveling with children a pleasure.

ONE OF THE first questions your travel agent may ask is the age of your children, and with good reason. Traveling with infants can prove very difficult because of their special needs. If they're between the ages of 6 and 12 they may adapt to travel with varying degrees of ease. But from 12 to 18 the decision is increasingly one of temperament and interest.

An experienced travel agent may well point out that a knowledge of your child's temperament — and your own — is the most important consideration.

Some of the questions to ask yourself are: Would your child make a good traveling companion? Does he adjust easily to change and constant travel? How does he react to strange people? Would you miss a lot while keeping a watchful eye on him? Could you ever relax?

On the other hand, would you be any happier leaving your children at home? Would it prove less expensive to leave them with a housekeeper, or pay for summer camp, than to take them with you? Then there is the question of peace of mind — would you worry about them constantly if they were left at home?

THE SOCIETY also offers these additional pointers:

1. Read up on the area you plan to visit. Discuss your travel plans in detail with your travel agent. Several good books on traveling with children will be invaluable to most parents. Among them are Frances Koltun's "The Intelligent Woman Traveler," Leila Hadley's "How to Travel With Children in Europe," and Violet Weingarten's "You Can Take Them With You." Some airlines and travel agents also have special booklets on the topic.

2. As most vacationers with children will need extra services while aboard ship or in a hotel, it is wise to anticipate extra tipping costs.

3. As often as possible, avoid long, tedious bus, plane or car rides. Children can become bored easily and resent the confinement which travel can require.

4. When possible, explain to children what they are looking at and where they are going. Get them involved in the planning of the trip.

5. Toys taken on a trip, like clothes, should be chosen with care. They should be carried easily. Avoid sharp objects or liquids, or games with pieces that are easily lost.

6. You might consider depositing your child for at least a part of the trip in a place just for children and there are many that cater especially to the English-speaking youngsters. Europe, particularly, is well supplied with fine camps and schools. There's also the possibility of placing your child with a well-recommended family. And finally, some countries even have professionally run "baby hotels" for tiny tots.

7. Reliable, often licensed, baby-sitters are normally available abroad at very modest rates.

8. Remember that even the best of traveling companions need time to themselves — including children.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

From RCA Victor:

We are waiting for this one, we fans of massive programmatic tone poems where all hell breaks loose orchestrally.

The recent Seraphim recording of this epic Strauss work, although conducted by the composer, didn't begin to do justice sound-wise to the tremendous musical resources heard here. A few of the sections of the work are: "At the Waterfall," "On the Glacier," and "Thunderstorm," all depicted in Strauss' usual uncanny style.

The orchestra includes heckelphones, contrabassoon, offstage trumpets and trombones, pipe organ, celeste, wind machine, thunder machine and cowbells in addition to the usual instrumental forces. The Dynagroove engineering is everything one could ask for fi-wise.

There are short pieces by John Dowland and Peter Philips of England, Alonso Mudarra of Seville, Simone Molinaro of Genoa, Newsidler and Bakfark of Hungary, Dlugoraj of Poland and Besard of France. All are exquisite and refined, and lovingly performed by Bream.

If you happen to have a medieval dining hall at hand and perhaps a few whippets to throw the bones to, here is just the music to accompany your feasts!

SORRY, LITTLE CHILD

Sorry, little child;
So hurt, so sad.
The whole world is wild,
Everyone's gone mad.
No one will lend a hand
To help him along;
Everything in this land
Has gone so wrong.

Do not cry, my baby;
So innocent, so small.
Freedom will come . . . maybe.
(Cannot tell him it may not come at all.)
New hope will come soon
To dry away your tears;
No food though to fill your spoon
Or wash away your fears.

Come to me, little one;
So thin, so tired.
No longer shines the sun,
The darkness caused when the big guns fired.
Tanks and bombs and planes
Change the day to night;
They cause my child's pains,
And with it too his fright.

Sorry, little child;
So cold, so still.
Amongst the debris piled
Burned and torn and broken
From a blast meant for such.
No words of peace are spoken
To bless his tender touch.

THE BOOK PAGES

Two From World War II— Tedder Memoirs, Naval Clash

By DON KEOWN

As revelations continue of the extent of the bickering and backbiting that took place among top Allied brass of World War II, one begins wondering how we won the war.

Then one realizes that wars, more often than not, have been won in spite of, not because of, the strategists. Somehow, the men who fire the rifles and wield the bayonets, who fly the planes and aim the bombs, who man the ships have managed to muddle through and do their gory jobs, although often at a fearful cost to them.

Historians, with their weakness for over-simplification, then proceed to credit the victory to this general or that admiral.

The growing impression of a general foul-up and free-for-all at the top among the Allies is reinforced by the publication of "With Prejudice," the memoirs of Lord Arthur Tedder, marshal of the Royal Air Force and deputy supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force.

A huge book, it seems at times to be one long record of quarrels among and intrigues against one another on the part of the men who supposedly formed the Allied "command team."

Nationalities wrangled with nationalities, militarists with politicians, services with other services, branches within the services with other branches, units with other units, and, most of all, personalities clashed with personalities.

Lord Tedder, one of the most able and stable among the Allied military leaders, had his differences, particularly with Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, a prima donna among prima donnas, and Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, a prime example of those commanders who remained wedded to outdated modes of warfare, a condition that particularly irked the air-minded Tedder.

Tedder's point of view was almost always closer to the American than to that of his fellow British. Time and time again, he sided with Dwight Eisenhower against Montgomery in their disruptive series of disputes.

Nor does Winston Churchill escape criticism. And when it comes to naming the "greatest man" he encountered, it is not Churchill, but South Africa's Jan Smuts, who gets Tedder's nod.

Not all things American escape his barbs. Pan American Airways, for instance, is indicted strongly for allegedly attempting to feather its commercial nest in time of war.

Tedder, if less arrogant and obstreperous than Montgomery, is nevertheless a pretty strong character in his own right. Outspoken, opinionated, often caustic, he has written candidly and in considerable detail.

Reading his big book is an ambitious undertaking, but a worthwhile one for the World War II history buff. There are long, windy passages of minor interest, and the air officer-author sometimes presumes a knowledge by his readers of military figures, incidents and places that may not hold true, particularly among Americans. But along the way, "With Prejudice" sheds much light on key personalities of the time and their decisions, and offers a critical analysis of those vital campaigns in which Tedder played a major role.

One may flinch at descriptions of how high brass in North Africa donned dinner jackets to entertain visiting VIPs, spooned into delicious mango ice in a luxurious Cairo hotel, or relaxed and watched the cricket matches while other men were fighting for and losing their lives not too far away at Tobruk. But that has always been the way with war. And as for that incessant, bitter wrangling at the top, there is ample evidence that things were as bad, or worse, on the Axis side.

A MUCH less exhaustive — and less exhausting—World War II book is Walter Lord's "Incredible Victory."

It pitted a powerful, supremely confident, previously victorious Japanese armada against a battered, makeshift, outmanned American fleet. There was every reason to expect yet another U.S. setback. Indeed, the initial skirmishes did not go at all well for the Americans. But courage, daring, perseverance and superior strategy—the last made possible by the cracking of the enemy code that laid bare his plans — eventually paid off, and the Japanese invasion threat against tiny Midway was shattered by desperately determined American naval and air forces.

Lord tells this story well and dramatically. He uses the device of personalizing his account by frequent utilization of the experiences, observations and reactions of involved individuals, of both high and low rank and from both sides. Hundreds of interviews and much investigation went into his efforts. It is no longer an original technique. But in the hands of a veteran and accomplished popular historian, it is still an effective one.

Lord does not weaken his book with blatant jingoism. He portrays Japanese emotions and actions with the same honesty he accords those of the Americans.

This is hardly deep, penetrating, definitive history. But it is interesting. And it does increase our understanding of a conflict that was as complex as it was crucial.

EVERYONE remembers 1929 as the year of the financial crash.

Readers of "Time Capsule: 1929," one of four paperbacks marking the debut of a new series from Time-Life Books, discover that in actuality there was very little awareness of or concern over the economical crisis ahead during the 12 months ending Dec. 31, 1929.

The public was preoccupied with its hero worship of "Lucky Lindy," the wrangling over whether Germany could or could not pay its World War I reparations, its traffic with the bootleggers, its idolizing of Babe Ruth, its antipathy toward Bolshevik atheism.

There was fierce fighting between Arab and Jew in Palestine, there was the infamous St. Valentine's Day massacre, there was Herbert Clark Hoover in the nation's highest office (and on the cover of this book).

Many memories, experienced personally or second-hand, come flooding back to mind as one reads the text made up of articles from the Time magazines of that year.

The three other published Time Capsule books cover the years 1921 (Charlie Chaplin on the cover), 1941 (Joe Louis) and 1950 (Douglas MacArthur). They sell for $1.65 each and offer an easy, interesting, if somewhat superficial way of brushing up on your 20th century history.

A Record On Stone Left By The First Americans

The record is extensive. The pictographs and petroglyphs are found over a wide area of North America. They range from doodlings to vast story-telling panoramas—the murals of the Indian, and from naturalistic to abstract.

Strangely enough, this rock art has received little notice except from archaeology. As art, it has been almost disregarded.

Campbell Grant, in "Rock Art of the American Indian," seeks to change that situation. He is himself an archaeologist, but finds the Indian rock art interesting also as art. He has produced a basic guide book describing its types, where found, and some of the figures and symbols that recur to provide clues to the customs and beliefs of the tribes of old.

His book, lavishly illustrated, is full of historical interest as well.

Sleuths And Suspense

MINUTES OF A MURDER by Madeleine Polland, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 189 pages, $3.95. Reviews by Don Keown.

This beautifully and powerfully written novel is certain to be one of the finest suspense books of 1967.

The setting is an Irish village of today. Returning there after a long absence is the man who shot and killed an IRA raider in the long ago but not forgotten time of "the trouble." Old hatreds and fears flare anew. In the center, but little more than a pawn, of the plotting is the son of the slain man, not quite bright and entirely unpredictable because of the head wound he suffered in Spain.

Miss Polland captures the flavor of the hard, simple village life wonderfully. Characterizations are superbly done, and with sympathy. And one becomes totally engrossed in the suspense of learning whether vengeance will or will not be done.

There's a terrible irony in the conclusion, and, in retrospect, a great deal of insight about the human animal to be gained from the reading of this fine, thoughtful story.

A MAN IN THE MIDDLE by M. E. Chaber, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 175 pages, $3.95.

From him, you get action without sadism, sex without orgies and heroics within the realm of believability.

In this, his 15th adventure, March "commutes" between the western U.S. and Hong Kong, doing battle with the syndicate and a ring shipping stolen drugs and other goods into Red China. There is, of course, a beautiful Chinese woman, Dragon Lady type, involved.

Not long on plotting, "A Man in the Middle" nevertheless offers sufficient storyline to introduce the always interesting array of Chaber characters, and to keep the pot boiling from one Milo March encounter with the "baddies" to the next.

"Something different" is the way Doubleday's Crime Club has classified this novel. Indeed, it is. Fascinatingly so.

It marks an adept wedding of the customs of small town Mississippi of the late 1930s, with its provincialism and its racial myths, and the age old beliefs of voodoo and lycanthropy.

A young Negro girl of Haitian descent is found slain, her throat horribly torn. The cry of the wolf is heard. But has she been the victim of man or beast? Or of a man-beast?

Deputy Sheriff Aaron Whitaker, ex-Marine, is the key figure in the investigation, and he must walk a tightrope, seeking justice while not offending the mores of the bayou country where he lives.

Sharp characterizations, mounting suspense, an interesting portrayal of a regional culture, and the exotic remnants of older, stranger cultures all make this novel, something of a throwback to the popular terror-horror tales of another time, entrancing reading.

A Scottish border town, stagnating financially, decides to give its economy a boost by "jazzing up" its usually quiet and folksy festival, in order to attract the tourist trade.

There arrives very timely on the scene the stranger Sinbad Mazeron who seems to the townspeople just the man to take over direction of their festival. Mazeron, however, is no God-send. It is soon apparent to the readers that he is an eerie and sinister figure, a part one can easily picture being played on the screen by Vincent Price, John Carradine, Basil Rathbone or perhaps Orson Welles. His interest lies in the old Druid blood rites and similar macabre subjects.

Along with Mazeron, Miss Gaird presents a whole array of interesting, more than usually complex cast of characters. The atmosphere is excellent. And she keeps her story moving well. Highly recommended for those who like their suspense reading on the imaginative and weird side.

New Books For Junior Readers

It is the story of two Oklahoma lads who set out on horseback in 1910 for New York City and a meeting with Teddy Roosevelt. What makes their feat, which they accomplished, so remarkable, indeed, almost unbelievable today, was their ages — 6 and 10. Some mothers today hesitate to let their children of that age set off alone for the corner grocery store.

The story of Bud and Temple Abernathy, as told by Jackson and illustrated with old photographs, ends with a return trip in a most unusual automobile.

Boys who read this book will awake to the realization that the American past did, indeed, produce real-life Tom Sawyers and Huckleberry Finns.

Turn-of-the-century Northern California is the scene for Elizabeth Allen's "The Forest House" (Dutton, $3.95). From Texas to that strange new roomy land and the great Forest House comes 11-year-old Amy with her parents to make her new home. It offers 9, 10 and 11-year-olds considerable insight into the way of life of a colorful era and area, as well as an interesting study of a youngster adjusting to new conditions and surroundings.

The juniors have their science fiction buffs, too. For them, Gerry Turner has written "Stranger From the Depths" (Doubleday, $3.50). Three teenagers find at the bottom of the sea a prehistoric lizard man who proves friendly and leads them on an adventurous trip into a lost world. It's an imaginative yarn for the upper grade students who enjoy this kind of wild fantasy.

Simply, interestingly, Franklin Russell tells the complex life story of "The Honeybees" (Knopf, $3.95) in the book of that title. He has the help of Colette Portal who provides large, informative illustrations, most of them in color. Russell keeps his wordage at a minimum, but succeeds in satisfying the curiosity of the young naturalist about one of our most fascinating and most beneficial inhabitants of the insect world. Aimed at 5 to 8-year-olds, it is probably best for those nearer the older level of this age range.

For Those Curious About China

Bloodworth, in writing "The Chinese Looking Glass," has done a rare and desirable deed. He has limited his objectives and achieved them.

His work is designed for the non-China-watching reader with a curiosity about that quarter of the earth's population that lives in the Central Kingdom.

The author has suitable credentials. He is an English journalist with a Chinese wife and children, living in Singapore, with 12 years of experience in the Far East. More important perhaps, he has thought a good deal about China's people — their habits and history, feelings and philosophy. In addition, he handles a complex subject with a light touch.

Popular assumptions about China have been badly skewed by the fact that the West has come to know China primarily in days of decline. Furthermore, the Ch'ing dynasty in the middle of its reign when China was opened up was past its prime and was not Chinese in origin. Western diplomats, military men and missionaries looked disdainfully upon the China they saw with its rigid and formalized society and static technology. They made generalizations about the Chinese that were unjust and that failed to take into account the flow of China's long history.

Bloodworth reminds us at many points that the West's technological ascendancy is of recent date: Chinese inventiveness ranged from the simplicity of the wheelbarrow (1000 years before the West) to the complexity of the seismograph (A.D. 132). In his view the stultification of Chinese science resulted from its capture and mis-use by the alchemists, whereas in Europe science rapidly passed through the magical charlatanism of alchemy to the pragmatic, experimental and tested technology of today.

Bloodworth makes excellent use of anecdotes and illustrations from China's past. With them he seeks to show the basic assumptions of a people and to compare and contrast them with our own. Life-styles are not born in a moment — they accrue over millenia. The acts of Mao Tse-tung and the reactions of Chinese peasants and workers must be seen in the context of Chinese history and in the light of present Chinese realities, or they are incomprehensible.

In particular, Bloodworth stresses China's sense of uniqueness and ethnocentricity, which affects all of her actions and attitudes.

The Comintern, that doctrinaire and inflexible arm of Russian Communism, failed in China because it was insensitive to the differences between China and Russia: if Marx said, and Russian experience demonstrated, that the industrial proletariat was to be the base for revolution, then it must be so. Even after repeated failures at applying this German-Russian panacea to the Chinese situation, the Soviet leaders castigated Mao when, upon seizing control, he built his base on the peasantry.

Careful study of the ebb and flow of Chinese history and of the dynamics of Chinese society may help us to avoid the unbending folly of the Comintern.

In sum, "The Chinese Looking Glass" is an extremely readable and perceptive introduction to the Chinese ways of life and thought.

The Most Colorful Of All The Conveyances

There are railroad buffs, ferry fans, horseless carriage lovers; but the conveyance with probably the widest appeal was the stagecoach.

It figured colorfully throughout American history until the coming of the automobile, and earlier it made romantic lore in Europe.

Although this is primarily, as the subtitle says, "the story of the frontier express lines that linked the nation together," Moody has gone back to prehistory to trace the beginnings of what later would be post roads before plunging into his primary story. And he takes a few sideline excursions en route —all interesting, however.

He seems to feel Gen. Stephen W. Kearny's "Army of the West" solely responsible for Indian hostility (incidentally he misspells Kearny's name throughout the book). And he is so outraged by the skullduggery of William H. Russell and Ben Holladay that he gives them a rather disproportionate share of his volume.

The role of the highwaymen, who harassed many stage lines much more than did the Indians, is left for the last chapter; and only Black Bart among the outlaws makes the book's pages. (I, for one, regret that Moody failed to even mention the Plummer gang.)

On the whole, though, this is a fine book; and it is a very readable one. Moody has done much research, and has woven the results into an entertaining volume of Western Americana.

There is no mention on the flyleaf that Ralph Moody made his first fame and fortune as a writer with "Little Britches." Only his "Old Trails West" is mentioned as "by the same author."

Novel For Those With Tin Ears

THE YEAR OF THE QUICKSAND by Paul Mok, Trident Press, 371 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

If your taste runs toward novels like "Peyton Place" and you have a tin ear for dialogue, you won't mind reading this one.

Surprisingly, this is not the author's first book, and he does mention through his characters that he has knowledge of fine writers like Updike — but his style is like a third-rate James Gould Cozzens.

The plot seems like it came out of a computer, or at least a committee.

The head of the main family is a school superintendent, one of his sons is a Vietnam Marine hero, the other son is a pleasure bent Ivy League college student who for the most part has sex on his mind. But never fear, we can hope for his salvation because he discovers . . . are you ready for this? . . . Tolstoy!

Just anything you might think of is in this book, murder, sex of the lady's magazine type (will he, won't he?), sex of the by-love-possessed type, a trial, suicide, arson, racial prejudice, hypocrisy . . . ad nauseam.

An Indian Story Of Success

TWO LEGGINGS by Peter Nabokov, Crowell, 197 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"Two Leggings" is the success story of a poor Crow Indian boy.

There is little of Horatio Alger about it, for it is told simply, dispassionately, as Two Leggings himself told it to William Wildschut, a researcher for the Museum of the American Indian. Although Peter Nabokov's name appears as author, his role was that of editor plus writing a sort of introduction to each chapter.

Two Leggings was an orphan boy who aspired to own great medicine and become a chief. He almost made it, becoming a pipe bearer who led war parties and horse-stealing raids. For such feats, there was honor among the Crows.

To achieve such eminence, there was fierce competition among the more ambitious of the Indian youth. And to be successful, one must always follow the tribal laws, controlled by deep and complicated superstitions. This was a lesson Two Leggings found hard to learn.

The way of life of an Indian warrior has seldom if ever been so illuminated as in Two Leggings' story. He was one of the last. He was an old man on a reservation when he told his story to Wildschut. And it closes:

"Nothing happened after that. We just lived. There were no more war parties, no capturing of horses from the Piegans and the Sioux, no buffalo to hunt. There is nothing more to tell."

This book, purporting to be a legally enlightening work, is a thinly disguised attempt to titillate the reader, but it fails as legal guide or as a stimulating treatise on sex.

Kansas Cooking From Time When Appetites Were Big

WHEN MEALS WERE MEALS by Maude Dickinson, Crowell, 185 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Kansas farmhouse cooking has — or did have —a distinctive quality of its own.

Ingredients were somewhat limited, but those available were pure and usually fresh from the land. There was no need to worry about calories, for harvest hands and hired men who labored in the fields from dawn to dusk burned up astonishing amounts of energy. What was needed was something satisfying to the inner man, and something that stuck to the ribs.

Maude Dickinson reaches back to her Kansas childhood for the material in this book. Along with recipes, she offers some remembrances of the kitchens and customs of that era that cannot help but awaken delightfully nostalgic memories among those of us who have assisted in the preparation of or partaken in these feasts.

The recipes have a hearty, old-fashioned ring — dishes like homemade mustard, Brown County bread pudding, burnt sugar cake, ham with parsnips, creamed dried beef, raisin pie, grapenut bread and bread crumb griddle cakes.

It's fun to read. And it's the solution for those appetites that sometimes tire of modern packaged and prepared foods or fancy foreign concoctions and hunger upon occasion for some plain, American "grub" that fills the stomach and builds the sinews.

A High Fence And Raised Bed For Good Background

Its An Effective Way To Show Off Your Plantings

Gardening is much more than making things grow. It's a matter of choosing and arranging plants to gain a total effect.

In many respects, gardening is like interior decorating because everything must be considered in terms of contrasts and complements — leaf and bark textures, petal colors, shapes and, of course, sizes. But outdoors, everything wears four faces, one per season, and that makes the job a bit tricky.

MOST IMPORTANT of all is to establish a good background, something that shows off the whole garden and fills in as certain plants wane.

That something is often a fence that can serve the dual purpose of screening the yard for privacy, as well. A tall, solid board fence is frequently the best possible choice, if permitted by zoning laws, for it accents both tall and low plants and makes a perfect espalier for exciting materials like an evergreen pear, choice roses, or a favored type of vine.

A high board fence also invites use of raised beds in certain areas of the yard—always a good way to create a change of pace and to make a big show with exotics, flowers, and small but interesting evergreens that sometimes get lost from view when set at ankle level.

Pressure-treated timbers or masonry may be used for a raised bed's retaining wall. In either case, it's well to minimize the wall by building a garden seat against it and propping up colorful cushions to make a backrest.

The board fence will be an attractive addition to the yard in itself if properly designed and sturdily built.

LANDSCAPE architects have found that four-inch-wide boards give the lightest touch, even for an unusually high fence, and that resawn lumber—red cedar, Douglas fir, pine or redwood—provides the texture needed to complement other garden textures.

Color-wise, the best shades are natural wood tones, sandy golds, a silver-moss green, and driftwood. Other hues compete unfavorably with plant colors, and the old favorite, white, is good only if it is sparkling fresh at all times. Any paint, in fact, is tough to maintain in top condition.

Handyman's Page

A HANDSOME board fence of resawn red cedar gives privacy and wind protection. The raised bed visually lowers the fence, and provides an opportunity for espaliers and other interesting plant materials. Seat of two-by-fours on angle irons minimizes the retaining wall. EVERGREEN PEAR may be a non-bearing tree as far as fruit is concerned, but it rewards its grower bountifully with a covering of fragrant white blossoms in the spring. Don't Forget The Grays

They'll Break The Monotony Of An All-Green Landscape

When they think of color for their garden, most Marinites are contemplating the bright hues of flowers. Or perhaps the green of foliage.

More thought, however, should be given to gray.

It can break the monotony of an all-green garden, contrast naturally with rocks and wood, and, because of its neutral color, be used to set off almost any other shrub.

MARINITES HAVE a wide range of gray shrubs from which to choose, ranging from the ground-hugging Snow-in-Summer to the graceful olive tree.

There are various shades of gray, as well, from the silvery-white foliage of the Dusty Miller to the greenish gray of the Tobira Pittosporum and the Pineapple Guava.

Bush Morning Glory is a favorite, too, with its silky gray foliage and open-faced white flowers. Give it a sunny spot.

SOME OTHER possibilities:

And Silvery Yarrow.

The afore-mentioned Dusty Miller gives you the choice of its low-edging variety, and its taller, bush-like variety. Both bear yellow flowers that contrast cheerfully with its silvery, fern-like leaves.

Now's The Time To Shop For Fuchsias

Garden Page

And now is the time to buy them — when you can see them in bloom at the nursery.

They can be transferred directly into your garden. Or, very often, they can simply be grown in the container in which they came.

This is particularly true of hanging basket containers, but also can apply to plants in nursery cans.

The shaded north side of a house, against an eastern wall or under high shade trees are ideal planting places for a fuchsia. The shade, however, should not be too dense. Top water frequently, and mulch with moisture-holding peat moss and leaf mold.

They like, too, an acid soil, and regular feeding with an acid plant food or liquid fish.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

- Sweet Peas planted from seed this month will give you flowers for cutting by Christmas time.
- A pre-cast garden pool complete with circulating pump may be easily installed.
- Feed pot-grown tuberous begonias at least once every two weeks for best results.
- Spike compacted lawns and spread finely ground soil conditioner or sand to keep water from running off.
- You can begin preparing soil for September plantings of pansy, viola, calendula, bachelor button and many other annuals that will give you late fall and winter bloom.

exciting concepts from Orinda pools

One reason more people are buying ORINDA pools this year is because ORINDA pools cost less to buy. Your ORINDA custom pool representative, in fact, can show you on paper that, not only is the base price lower in most cases, but when you add the options you want, the price advantage of an ORINDA pool becomes even greater.

And because it is an ORINDA pool, you get all the advantages of an ORINDA pool. The uncommon luxury of design and engineering by Orinda, and styling leadership that has made ORINDA Pools the best selling in northern California.

All of which is still just the beginning. *A giant Laars boiler is included with the 1967 Orinda Custom Royal Series providing low cost heating year long. You also have the traditionally conservative value of an ORINDA pool to enjoy. On top of all the other advantages.

The FBI Gets A New Agent— He's William Reynolds Of TV

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — William Reynolds, a veteran of three unspectacular television series in the past, joins Efrem Zimbalist Jr. in the third year of "The FBI" this season, happy to be associated with a hit.

Because he was orphaned as a youngster, Bill is a strong family man, a stay-at-home guy.

He and his wife, Molly, have been married 17 years and are the parents of Carrie, 8, and Eric, 7.

THEIR HOME is a modest three-bedroom ranch-style in Northridge, an unfashionable suburb in the San Fernando Valley.

Molly, once a model and actress herself, has decorated the house with Italian furniture, much of it old provincial pieces she has redone herself. Her pride and joy is a 185-year-old grandfather clock which still bongs the hour and half-hour.

Air conditioning is a must in their section of the valley, and it is a hot half-hour drive from home to Warner Bros. studios where the ABC-TV series is filmed.

FORTUNATELY, much of the series is filmed at night on exterior locations in and around Los Angeles.

On occasion the show takes Bill to Palm Springs or San Diego where the company may spend three days at a time on location. When "The FBI" is moving around it's necessary for Bill to arise at 5 a.m. to be prepared to leave the studio at 6:30.

WILLIAM REYNOLDS
Finally with a hit

"I'm a grouch when I get up in the morning," Bill admits with a grin. "So rather than wake up the rest of the family I settle for some fruit juice and a glass of milk before leaving."

REYNOLDS LOOKS at acting realistically. Unless you're a big star it is an off-and-on occupation. To fill in the dry spells Bill became a licensed real estate broker two years ago. He's also studying real estate law.

"I intend to keep my hand in real estate even when I'm working," he says. "An actor should be prepared for the vagaries of show business."

Bill's previous experiences with television series were "Pete Kelly's Blues"—a bomb—"The Islanders" and "Gallant Men."

BEFORE ACCEPTING the "FBI" role of a young agent, Reynolds visited J. Edgar Hoover in Washington. Bill was impressed by Hoover and convinced that the FBI's top man watches the show regularly.

Reynolds stays close to home on weekends, but takes time out on Saturday to play golf (he shoots in the 80s) on public courses.

He dresses casually in slacks and sports shirts. The Reynolds seldom entertain. When they do it is informal dinners among friends and neighbors. Neither do they dine out often or attend parties.

"You can bet I didn't give the dog that name," Reynolds concludes. "But the kids are growing up in a happy atmosphere away from the temptations of show business, and that's the way I want it."

FM Radio Increases Its Share Of Sales

"What's up in FM? Everything," claims William D. Greene, director of CBS/FM, in reporting FM radio's current growth in set sales, number of homes and commercial stations.

"It is surely safe to predict that sales of radios with FM will soon account for half of all radio, or to put it another way, that FM will equal AM," he says, after citing the 73 per cent increase in set sales figures from 1965 to 1966.

HE ALSO NOTES the six-fold increase since 1960 in the number of FM sets in U.S. homes, currently estimated at 38 million, and the rise in the number of commercial FM stations from approximately 800 in 1960 to current estimates of 1,700.

Greene traces recent increases in radio audience figures, noting the significance of the fact that last fall the American Research Bureau made the first study of FM radio listening using the single media diary system, reported by the ARMS committee to be the most reliable and accurate method.

He believes that to show the FM audience in relation to the total radio audience is to shortchange FM, since total radio listening figures include as much as 50 per cent of homes without FM.

An interesting sidelight of ARB studies noted by Greene is the fact that the FM share of audience reaches its peak during evening hours when TV viewing is at its highest. He concludes, "Obviously, FM offers advertisers the ability to reach the light television viewer."

HE ALSO OUTLINES the characteristics of FM listeners as compiled from available data and from mail response to the CBS/FM music programming concept, "The Young Sound," now broadcast by the CBS-owned FM stations and other stations across the country.

According to Greene, FM listeners are concentrated strongly in the age groups between 18 and 49, earn above average income, represent all educational groups and show a high degree of involvement with their favorite FM stations and with the medium as a whole.

FM radio's booming growth explains why CBS/FM is vitally interestested in the medium, concludes Greene, adding: "FM has grown up in the first half of the 1960s. We are sure that the best is yet to come."
